Mediation Board Panel Reports 'Real Progress' on Tie-up In Pennsylvania

Washingtonians speak their minds on defense strikes. See Pictures and Story on Page 17.

An armistice in the last of four preparedness-hampering strikes which have been certified to the National Defense Mediation Board appeared near last night as board members remained up late to mediate a C. I. O. walkout at the Bridgeville, Pa., plant of the Vanadium Corporation of America.

Ending a conference of more than eight hours here, a board panel reported "real progress has been made" and hope for "a definite announcement" today was expressed.

The word followed the end earlier in the day of a strike at four plants of the International Harvester Co., where nearly 15,000 C. I. O. Farm Equipment Workers agreed to return today to their jobs on $10,000,000 worth of gun carriages, tractors and other defense equipment.

All issues, which resulted in a walkout January 29, will be submitted for negotiation before a Mediation Board panel here today.

The board obtained settlement of a third strike, at the Cornell Dubilier Corporation in Plainfield, N. J., in negotiations Saturday. The fourth, at the Universal Cyclops Co., was settled after the board had summoned participants here but before the board could act.

Truce at Cambria

A generally favorable picture of lessening labor friction in the defense program began to take form from the newly-established board's mediation successes, from the early morning truce yesterday in a two-day-old C. I. O. strike at the Bethlehem Steel Corporation's huge Cambria works at Johnstown, Pa., and from a back-to-work movement of the Allis-Chalmers manufacturing works at Milwaukee.

However, the Nation's major bituminous coal operators and the C. I. O. United Mine Workers of America prepared for a possible work stoppage in almost three-fourths of the country's soft coal mines, the Associated Press reported.

They still clung to a bare hope that suspension could be averted by agreement on a new contract by this midnight. At the end of the thirteenth day of negotiations at

March to Gambol Out Like a Lamb, Weatherman Says

March will exit today with lamb-like weather, the Weather Bureau promised last night, predicting temperatures up to 60 degrees for the District.

Increasing cloudiness will prevent the mercury from soaring to the March 3 high for this year of 68, the experts said.

Yesterday's early cold spell was broken when the sun raised temperatures from 25 in the early morning to 46 degrees in the afternoon. Police reported that crowds lured out by balmy weather were "larger than usual." No serious accidents were reported.

Sleepy-Time Girl Goes to Job Today Under Staggered Hours

Eva Gradijan cuts off the alarm—an hour earlier.

In the name of traffic, William A. Van Duzer and the Budget Bureau! That's what Miss Eva Gradijan, in a pretty flowered nightie, seems saying to the clock arousing her from sleep, as it will at 6 a. m. today, exactly 12 minutes after the sun rises.

Miss Gradijan is 23 and a cost accountant in the Geological Survey of the Interior Department, where all employes will come in at 8 a. m. or Secretary Ickes will know why. She is just one of the thousands of Government workers affected by the new "staggered" hours which are expected to relieve the District traffic situation.

There's an easy bit of accounting on the sleep Miss Gradijan, who typifies them all in the Department, will stand to lose. On the red side of the slumber ledger she drops one hour.

Gives hat final pat

Final tug for hose

On Saturday morning she went to work at 9 a. m., long the accustomed time. This had compelled her to arise at 7 a. m.. Now she will get up at 6 a. m. to help correct the downtown traffic situation.

But for Miss Gradijan's hurry and worry of mornings, there is a compensatory angle. She is an enthusiastic member of the Interior Department Recreation Association and can engage in the organization's afternoon sports one hour longer.

In any event, like it or not, Miss Gradijan's reaching for the button on the alarm clock depicts exactly what thousands of fingers will do around 6 a. m. today. So whenever the dancing grows pleasant and the bands play "It's Three O'Clock in the Morning,"—well, remember the traffic situation! The alarm clock will! (Detailed Story on Page 15.)

Strikes Peril Recess Plan

By Henry N. Dorris

With major defense items out of the way or ready for final action, Congress is planning a 10-day recess over Easter but there loomed last night the threat of opposition unless the defense strike situation improves considerably.

With the mail of members of Congress growing by leaps and bounds, containing mostly suggestions and demands for outlawing defense strikes or providing for "cooling off" periods before strikes, several members said privately they would be compelled to insist that Congress remain on the job unless a better disposition is displayed by both labor and industry connected with defense contracts.

Representative Smith, of Virginia, backed by a considerable number of members, plans to ask speedy consideration of his resolution to reconstitute the committee to investigate the National Labor Relations Board. The same powers given to this committee last year are considered broad enough to permit Smith and his group to investigate defense strikes and labor

RAF Aces Go To Singapore

By C. Yates McDaniel
Associated Press Staff Writer

Singapore, March 30.—Crack fighter pilots from the Battle of Britain and veterans of the campaign in France have reached this British Far Eastern stronghold to reinforce its already strengthened defenses, it was disclosed officially today.

Arrival of veteran units of the British and Indian armies and the Royal Air Force was announced by Air Marshal Sir Robert Brooke-Popham, Britain's commander in chief in the Far East.

Singapore's defense already had been raised to unprecedentedly formidable proportions last February 18 when Australian forces came to join the armed watch over this key link in Britain's empire life line.

The aviation reinforcement was the first to arrive from the home front in England since the outbreak of the war. Land forces included infantry, artillery and mechanized units equipped with the latest weapons perfected on the battlefields of Flanders and Africa, the announcement said.

Roosevelt Heading for Capital To Speed Arms to Foes of Axis

On Board the President's Train, March 30.—President Roosevelt already has authorized transfer of additional war supplies to Britain and her Allies battling "an alliance of dictator nations" in line with his policy for "action and more action."

This was revealed tonight by a responsible authority, who said that additional arms already had been transferred to Great Britain and Greece and indicated that the President might make an announcement to this effect in a press conference upon his arrival in Washington Tuesday. Meanwhile, however, the items involved were kept secret.

It was thought possible th... torpedo boats were involved in this transfer, since a flotilla of these left Miami for an undisclosed destination last week.

It was possible to get only general information aboard the Presidential train and it was unknown whether Yugoslavia, which has been pledged American support in its new policy of opposing Germany, was involved. That Yugoslavia would be ignored at this moment was regarded as un-

Survivors of 6th Fascist Vessel Land in Greece; Toll May Rise

By David Anderson

London, March 30.—The British navy, fighting what is now called unquestionably the greatest sea battle of this war, has sunk the Italian heavy cruisers Fiume, Pola and Zara and the destroyers Vincenzo Gioberti and Maestrale, as well as crippling a battleship of the Littorio class, the admiralty announced today.

Admiral Sir Andrew Cunningham, commander in the Mediterranean, reported no casualties and no damage of any British ships engaged. Two planes of the fleet air arm are missing. News of further Italian losses, together with details of where and how the engagement was fought still are awaited.

(A Greek bulletin reporting the landing of Italian survivors in Piraeus spoke of the naval action as taking place in the Ionian Sea.

(The Greek announcement said survivors from the Fiume, Pola and Zara, as well as the destroyer Alfieri, not mentioned in the London communique, were landed at Piraeus. This indicated, according to some quarters, that a sixth Italian war vessel had been sunk.

("Janes Fighting Ships" lists the Vittorio Alfieri, sometimes called the Alfiera, among the Italian destroyers of the same class as the Vincenzo Gioberti.)

Statement Brought Relief

Positive official statements that Italy has indeed suffered a severe naval defeat were welcomed by the British people, who were half fearful that yesterday's communiques announcing "damage" to the Italian ships would end up with virtually all those speedy craft dashing or limping home as they did on an earlier occasion.

All three cruisers sunk were of the 10,000-ton, 8-inch-gun class and with the Gorizia, the only one remaining, constituted more than half of Mussolini's heavy cruiser strength. About ten years old, these ships had speeds of about 34 knots and carried 700 men each. The Fiume was hit in a previous fleet action off Sardinia on November 27.

The sinking of the destroyer Vincenzo Gioberti came as a relief to British naval authorities, since she is a new powerful vessel of exceptionally high speed (39 knots) and hard to get when obeying the accepted Italian policy of evading action. The Maestrale, though smaller, was armed identically.

Entrapment a Puzzle

Great store is set by the admiralty's official wording of "further details awaited," with the implication that additional Italian ships may have been destroyed. Interest naturally conters in the fate of the battleship.

Speculation here revolves about

English Report Hits On Algerian Batteries, Escape Bomb Damage

London, March 30.—French shore batteries in Algeria fired on light units of the British fleet this morning when the British vessels attempted to intercept a French convoy carrying "important war material for Germany" via the Strait of Gibraltar, the admiralty announced here tonight.

The warships returned the fire and scored hits on the shore batteries, but the French convoy succeeded in reachng the nearby port of Nemours. French bombing planes attacked the British ships while they were returning to Gibraltar, but caused no damage.

The British assertion that the French vessels were carrying war material for Germany was sharply denied in Vichy, where it was said that the ships were transporting food from Casablanca, French Morocco, to Orann, Algeria, for the Belgrade, March 30.—Axis nationals began the evacuation of all Yugoslavia today, leaving by special train, river boat and automobile, as German press dispatches said Yugoslavia had hinted she might occupy Albania should Germany start a march into Greece.

Twelve hundred nervous German men, women and children jammed every available corner of the Danube River excursion boat Uranus; 3,000 other Germans were fleeing Croatia, which touches old Austria.

Among the excited crowd on the Uranus were several German journalists who a few weeks ago in Bucharest and Sofia reported the British evacuations from those capitals—and now are fleeing themselves.

(In Berlin, the German radio announced Yugoslavia had closed its German frontier except for one crossing between Maribor and Spielfeld.)

Germans and Italians began leaving not only Serbia, but also the more friendly provinces of Croatia and Slovenia, in a movement expected to be completed Monday.

Sabotage Given as Reason For Boarding Nazi, Fascist Craft Under Authority Of Espionage Act of 1917

By William V. Nessly
Post Staff Writer

The United States last night took over control of 35 Danish merchant ships in nine American ports, climaxing a day which earlier had seen two German and 28 Italian vessels also taken into custody.

Sabotage and suspicion of sabotage aboard the craft were given as the reason for the actions, all of which were carried out under authority of the Espionage Act of June 15, 1917, implemented by a proclamation by President Roosevelt last June 27, giving the Secretary of the Treasury emergency authority over foreign and domestic shipping in American waters and harbors.

Centering world attention again on the critical importance of ship bottoms in the European war, the Government's rapid-fire strokes involved a total estimated 300,000 tons of merchant craft.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Herbert E. Gaston, announcing the earlier steps against the Italian and German ships,

'Act of War,' Says Italian Captain

Portland, Oreg., March 30 (AP).—Capt. Giovanni Polonio, of the Italian motorship Leme, tonight called the United States Government's seizure of his vessel "an act of war." Capt. Polonio told newsmen that "war likely will come" as result of the seizure.

Capt. Polonio admitted his men had damaged the ship because "she was going to be seized by your country." He shrugged his shoulders when asked who gave the order.

declared that it was purely "protective," caused by "wholesale damage" to many of the ships.

However, American law gives the Government authority to declare such ships forfeited to the Government when sabotage is carried out aboard.

The actions were ordered by Treasury Secretary Morgenthau, with approval of President Roosevelt.

In widespread, suddenly executed forays, armed Coast Guardsmen, joined in several cases by bayonet-carrying, steel-helmeted Marines, boarded the vessels, removed the crews, numbering more than 1,000 sailors and officers, and placed their own guards aboard the craft.

In most cases the ships' colors were taken down and the United States flag run up.

Hardly had diplomatic and official circles regained composure from the surprise occasioned by taking over of the 30 Axis ships, than the Coast Guard announced that the 35 Danish bottoms likewise had been placed under American custody.

Fifteen of the latter were at New York, three at Boston, eight at Baltimore, two each at Philadelphia, Norfolk, and Los Angeles and one each at Portland, Me., Gray Harbor, Wash. and Jacksonville, Fla.

These were all immobilized ships, no action being taken against Danish ships actually operating out of American ports.

Most of the Italian and German craft were taken over without disorder, but some resistance, quickly halted, was reported when the Coast Guardsmen boarded the Italian ship Confidenza at Jacksonville.

The German vessels taken over, the only Nazi craft in United States harbors, were the tanker Pauline Friedrich, at Boston, and the freighter Arauca, at Port Everglades, Fla. It was near the latter ship that President Roosevelt was tied up recently while awaiting weather that would permit the start of his sea cruise. The President left his yacht Potomac at Port Everglades yesterday and boarded a train for Washington only a short time before the Arauca was taken into custody.

The engine of the Nazi ship at Boston was practically wrecked and the ship itself was in a virtually sinking condition, it was said here.

No comment was obtainable at either the German or Italian Embassy.

In New York City, George Bech, Danish consul-general, said he had not been notified of the seizure of Danish ships, but added: "When I read about the Italian ships, I was afraid something like this would happen."

The Danish ships taken into custody were announced by the Coast Guard here as follows, with the tonnage taken from Lloyd's register:

New York—Australian Reefer, 2,321; Broholm, 1,544; Georgia, 2,272; Gertrud, 2,282; Jonna, 1,517; Lundby, 4,150; Maria, 1,369; Nora, 2,937; Olympia, 4,488; Paula, 1,549; Sessa, 1,700; Tanja, 1,392; Tunis, 1,641; Sigillen, 1,654; Marna, 1,700.

Baltimore—The Alssund, 3,222; Anna Maersk, 5,339; Brosund, 2,939; Laura Maersk, 6,599; Lexa Maersk, 5,614; Niel Maersk, 5,086; Ragnhild, 2,252.

Portland—Jutta, 1,549.

Gray's Harbor, Wash.—Nordvest, 4,702.

Jacksonville, Fla.—Caroline Maersk, 7,691.

Los Angeles, Calif.—Uordhval, 4,473; Nordpol, 4,480.

No evidence of sabotage was found on the Danish vessels and it was made clear here that the boardings were due to fear of sabotage by persons outside the personnel of the ships.

While Coast Guardsmen, assisted by Marines in some cases, boarded 29 of the ships, Army and Navy au-

Doctor, Son of U. S. Official, Is Arrested in Wife's Murder

Dr. Merrill Joss 31, son of Dr. Edward C. Joss, chief of the meat inspection division of the Bureau of Animal Industry in the Agriculture Department, was arrested yesterday in Richmond, Me., on a warrant charging murder in the bludgeon death of his 38-year-old physician-wife, the Associated Press reported.

MRS. JOSS

DR. JOSS

Protesting that he was innocent, Dr. Joss was taken into custody at his old colonial mansion after returning from funeral services for his wife, and was rushed to Augusta by State police.

Dr. Joss had collapsed in the arms of his mother, Mrs. Miriam C. Joss, who went with her husband to their son's home after learning the body of their daughter-in-law, Dr. Luverne Harris, had been found in the cellar of her home with 26 bludgeon marks on her head.

At the time of his arrest Dr. Joss appeared on the verge of collapse and had to be supported by State Police Chief Henry P. Weaver, who served the warrant.

Friends of the Joss family in Washington said that the arrested man had attended Harvard University and had visited his parents frequently in Washington.

Dr. Joss was questioned six hours by police Saturday night. Officers at that time gathered from his story that a drug addict had attacked his wife in her office after he had sought in vain to purchase narcotics.

Dr. Joss attended his wife's funeral in a virtual state of collapse, and during services he repeatedly brushed away his tears. He was accompanied by his parents.

Looking Ahead

Serbs Massing Near Albania, Great Allied Attack Expected

Copyright by New York Times

Bitolj, Yugoslavia, March 30.—Judging from available indications a terrific Allied attack on Albania is now distinctly probable and could result not only in an Axis disaster of at least the magnitude of Dunkerque but conceivably in Italy's elimination from the war.

If Hitler has any plan up his sleeve to prevent this, no one has an inkling of it.

Already Mussolini's Balkan expeditionary force of 300,000 is suffering considerably from extensive losses inflicted by the Greeks during the unsuccessful seven-day spring offensive which took place during the Duce's Albanian visit.

After that failure the Italians asked the Greeks for a 24-hour armistice merely to bury their dead. The Greeks, while agreeing to a shorter period, made it conditional on a further Italian request. This was not forthcoming.

Now the Greeks are believed to be preparing an offensive of their own along the entire front from Lake Ochrid to the Adriatic Sea. Yugoslavia has concentrated an army of considerable magnitude along a series of salients from the Greek frontier to Montenegro and British forces are pouring into

Army Seeks Additional Parachutists

Copyright by New York Times

The War Department announced steps yesterday to procure additional officers and enlisted men for parachute groups and also transferred two more officers to headquarters of the parachute group, Fort Benning, Ga.

The new officers and enlisted men are to be used for the eventual activation of the 502d, the 503d and the 504th Parachute Battalions. The 501st Parachute Battalion is in being at Fort Benning.

The announcement in part follows:

"To the group headquarters, which begins to function on April 1 under command of Lieut. Col. William C. Lee, Infantry, have been assigned Maj. Clarence M. Tomlinson, Infantry, as supply officer, and Capt. Roy Lindquist, Infantry, as adjutant and plans and training officer.

"Col. Lee, who has been on duty in the office of the chief of infantry, was assigned as group commander recently.

"Commanding generals of all armies, army corps, corps areas, departments and divisions have been instructed to obtain applications immediately from all infantry officers who desire to transfer to parachute battalions. Approximately 100 are required.

"Officers in continental United States volunteering for these assignments must be reported to the chief of infantry not later than May 1, and those in foreign departments, June 1. Officers of the Regular Arm ymust have had at least one year's service with troops as of September 1, 1941. For reserve officers the requirement is six months with troops.

"Vacancies are open to second and first lieutenants, captains, and majors. Majors must not be over 40 years of age. The maximum age for captains and lieutenants is 35 years.

"The 502d Parachute Battalion is scheduled for activation July 1, 1941; the 503d, September 1; and finally, the 504th on November 1. With four such battalions in service, the Army will have almost 2,000 in its parachute group. Approximately 1,500 officers and men of this force will be jumpers. The four battalions will be at Fort Benning, Ga.

"Enlisted jumpers must be at least 66 inches tall and not more than 74 inches. Applicants must have had at least six months' service in the Regular Army and must have at least one more year to serve in their enlistment. However, men who have less than a year to serve in their current enlistment may be discharged and reenlisted for transfer to the parachute battalions."

65 Danish, Axis Ships Taken Over

thorities took similar action on the 23,000-ton Italian liner Conte Biancamano at Cristobal, Canal Zone. The 500-man crew of that vessel was removed, but was later returned to the ship with 100 soldiers and sailors on guard.

Eventual disposition of the crews remained a question. The Treasury announced they had been placed in custody of the various port captains pending their transfer to immigration authorities. There was some speculation that the officers and sailors would be detained until a means could be found of returning them to their home countries, but there was talk also of filing charges of illegal residence against some of them.

Sabotage, which Gaston said included "destruction of machinery and boilers" was presumed to have been caused by fear that the ships would be taken over by the United States and find their way into the British service.

However, Gaston's statement said the action by this country was designed to prevent the wreaking of further damage, which would constitute a menace to United States ships and to the traffic being carried on in United States harbors.

Damage, first reported by Naval Intelligence, had been accomplished on 20 Italian craft before the Coast Guardsmen arrived, it was said. Efforts were being made to learn who had ordered the sabotage, described as general and simultaneous.

At Houston, Tex., Capt. Ranise Ernesto of the Mongioia was quoted by the Associated Press as saying the Italian Naval attache here had ordered him to destroy the machinery in his ship.

Reciting instances of damage, Gaston said that the machinery of one vessel at Norfolk, Va., had been torn down. One crew in Norfolk was caught starting a fire under a dry boiler.

Details of the damage done to five Italian vessels were supplied by Harry Sommers, acting deputy chief of the Newark, N. J., Fire Department, who accompanied Coast Guard officers on an inspection.

Work of a Week

"They must have spent at least a week smashing machinery," he told the Associated Press. "Acetylene torches were used to cut pistons. Generators were chopped and hacked with axes. Bearings were unbolted and chisels used to put them beyond repair."

From other cities where the vessels are tied up came similar accounts.

Smashed Diesel engines, battered cylinder heads and pistons, broken gears, bent axle rods, ruined navigation instruments, and hacked shafts combined to give a picture of systematic sabotage.

All the ships had taken refuge in United States ports months ago to escape the British sea patrol. While most had remained empty after discharging their cargos here, a few had taken on fresh cargo.

In New York City, Italo E. Verrando, general manager for the Italian line in the United States, declined to say whether a protest was planned or to discuss the reports of sabotage aboard the vessels.

"We have no comment to make for the time being," he said. "We are studying the situation and awaiting further information."

Verrando said the amount of Italian shipping tied up in United States ports "roughly" approximated 175,000 tons and that between 1,000 and 1,500 Italian seamen were aboard.

There was speculation in some quarters last night whether Latin-American nations would follow this Government's lead and take over Axis craft in their harbors. Authorities said there are 56 Italian ships, 40 German and 50 ships of neutral nations now tied up in South American ports.

In addition to the Italian, German and Danish ships which the Government acted against yesterday, there are 28 French and 12 Latvian and Estonian ships in the United States waters. The latter 12 are claimed by Russia as a result of her absorption of the two Baltic countries, but the claim has not been recognized by the United States.

Italian Ships Seized Total 168,944 Tons

New York, March 30 (AP).—The 28 Italian ships in American ports taken under custody today by U. S. Coast Guardsmen totaled 168,944 gross tons—approximately 5 per cent of the prewar Italian merchant marine.

The tonnage represented more than 50 per cent of Italian merchant ships lost through capture and sinking since the war began—latest figures show Italy had lost 59 ships of 317,551 tons.

Text of Law Authorizing U. S. to Seize Foreign Ships

The text of the section of the 1917 Espionage Act under which the Secretary of the Treasury acted yesterday in taking control of 66 Danish, Italian and German ships in United States harbors reads as follows:

"Whenever the President by proclamation or Executive Order declares a national emergency to exist by reason of actual or threatened war, insurrection or invasion, or disturbance or threatened disturbance of the international relations of the United States, the Secretary of the Treasury may make, subject to the approval of the President, rules and regulations governing the anchorage and movement of any vessel, foreign or domestic, in the territorial waters of the United States, may inspect such vessels at any time, place guards thereon, and, if necessary in his opinion in order to secure such vessels from damage or injury, or to prevent damage or injury to any harbor or waters of the United States, or to secure the observance of the rights and obligations of the United States, may take, by and with the consent of the President, for such purposes full possession and control of such vessel and remove therefrom the officers and crew thereof and all other persons not specifically authorized by him to go or remain on board thereof.

"Within the territory and waters of the Canal Zone the Governor of the Panama Canal, with the approval of the President, shall exercise all the powers conferred by this section on the Secretary of the Treasury."

June 27, 1940, the President issued a proclamation making possible the exercise of the powers set forth in the Act.

847 Va. Families Await Word To Evacuate Land Army Needs

Special Dispatch to The Post

Bowling Green, Va., March 30.—Told definitely that America's First Army must acquire the 110,000 acres of rich sweet-potato land lying to the east of here for a maneuver ground, Caroline County now waits official word when to begin the first large-scale evacuation the defense program has brought to this section of the Eastern Seaboard.

Just when the trucks, automobiles and wagons must begin hauling out the household effects of the 471 white and 375 colored families in the maneuver area—which comprises one-third of the county's land—was unknown.

(Maj. Gen. Walter S. Grant, Third Corps Area commandant at Baltimore, told The Post yesterday that he could not comment at this time on future moves in the Virginia county.)

The citizens on the land wanted by the Army generally are resigned to leaving. Commonwealth's Attorney Bernard Mahon, who has served with citizen committees treating with the Army, estimated that not more than one-fourth of the evacuees could be suitably settled in other sections of Caroline. Many farmers, he said, are hoping to make homes in adjoining counties.

General concensus in Bowling Green, a village of one short business street, is that commerce will be hard hit, that such nearby and larger places as Richmond and Fredericksburg will more likely benefit from the soldier trade.

The town has been entirely dependent on agricultural trade. The area wanted by the Army produced crops annually valued at $545,000 and the greater portion of the money circulated one way or another in Bowling Green, Mahon pointed out.

To buy a training site in Virginia the Army last February asked an appropriation of $1,650,000.

Mahon emphasized that the citizens are willing "to make the sacrifice as a contribution to the defense program." But no boom for Bowling Green is expected. Rather, a possible 50 per cent decrease in trade may result from the loss of the area by the farmers, he said. Gen. Grant, he said, has "acted splendidly," and the citizens, though still concerned, are accepting their situation calmly now.

The Army, Mahon understands, will buy the area outright. Whether the present owners might have opportunity to buy it back when the emergency is ended has not been contemplated, Mahon said. "It might simply be left as a barren waste," he reflected.

The Army's procedure first would be to seek to buy the properties, and if no satisfactory basis is reached with the owners, condemnation may be carried into the Federal court of the district, where experts on land values would be called on for opinions, Army authorities said.

Italians Trapped In Ravine, Left Dead 'in Heaps'

New York, March 30 (AP).—Describing Italian dead "in heaps," the war correspondent of the Greek newspaper Estia in a broadcast on the Athens radio tonight heard here by C. B. S., said that in one ravine 50 yards deep and 300 yards wide alone he had counted "over 400 Italian bodies."

"On the surrounding heights of the Albanian front where the Italian attacks have been made in the last two weeks the Italian dead lie in heaps, and form a ghastly sight," he said.

"I was informed that the Italians, while the operations were still in progress, attempted to penetrate our lines by marching up this ravine under cover of mist. They were isolated by our forces, and suffered very heavy losses. At one point machine guns from the Greek trenches had mowed them down by hundreds."

Nazi Ship Leaves Shanghai With 2 Japanese Warships

Shanghai, March 30 (AP).—The 7,983-ton Nazi motor passenger liner Ramses slipped her anchorage in the confluence of the Yangtze and Whangpoo Rivers last night, foreign sources reported today, and went to sea in the company of two Japanese destroyers.

The Ramses, which has been tied up here since December, 1939, was believed by shipping circles to be headed for Kobe, Japan, to load supplies and perhaps steam into the southern Pacific to meet Nazi raiders.

As far as was known no British warships were nearer than Hongkong, and her interception was regarded as unlikely.

The Italian ship, Conte Verde, 18,765 tons, is the sole Axis ship now remaining at Shanghai with the exception of a few small coastal steamers flying Italian and German flags which actually belong to Chinese companies.

U. S. Plans Flight Strips for Planes Along Highways

The American Automobile Association announced yesterday the Federal Government is considering plans for the extensive development of flight strips along the main highways of the country.

The strips of broad, unobstructed roadway could be used by planes for landing or taking off.

Thomas P. Henry, of Detroit, president of the A. A. A., said that the strips, in contrast with emergency airports away from the beaten paths of travel, would be strategically placed for maximum service, military as well as civilian.

New York, March 30.—Extension of the British censorship at Bermuda to the point of ordering the ship of a neutral country off the high seas and then searching and questioning her passengers for three days was disclosed today when the Portuguese ship Serpa Pinto discharged her 640 passengers, representing 29 nationalities, here today.

Capt. Amerigo Santos, master of the Serpa Pinto, said he received wireless instruction from the Bermuda authorities ordering him to bring his ship to Bermuda. There the wallets, pocketbooks and personal papers of the passengers were seized, examined and later returned.

Letter Tells Why Business Must Sell

Here is a letter written by one of my friends, a life insurance agent in a small city in western Pennsylvania, describing what it takes to provide good jobs and family security in America. He is writing to another businessman in his home city.

"Last week you came into my office and told me you wanted another life insurance policy.

"I wonder if you realize that you were the 34th person to do this in the 20 years I have been a life insurance agent. Not quite two a year! During this time I have made about 25,000 business calls and arranged protection for many hundreds of people.

"I have come to know intimately the problems of 400 families in this community. Over 100 of these I have followed for a full generation, and in some cases I am now arranging personal security for three generations of one family. Of all the people I know and have served, only a handful believe they have enough insurance. And yet you are only the 34th to come and ask for more!

"Life insurance is an odd kind of business. Everybody wants it, but expects it to be brought to them. Oh well, the things we manufacture here in town didn't just walk into people's homes all over America—electric pumps and clothes wringers, for example. Somebody had to show people what these things could do for them. Sometimes I wonder what this country would be like—how many people would have good jobs and good family security—if it weren't for American salesmanship.

"As you know, this city has a population of 115,000. Of these, 65,000 carry life insurance—117 million dollars' worth. It is a good manufacturing town and you had a part in making it so. It is a better-than-average insurance town and I had a part in making it so. We both know what it is going to take to make it better—honest, vigorous selling of what people need."

R. A. F. Bombs Illumine Sky Above Channel

By the Associated Press

London, March 30.—British bombers struck at the German invasion ports along the English Channel from Calais to Boulogne tonight in a raid so intense that bomb explosions and fires lit the English coast line.

Shore watchers described this latest in a series of British raids on possible German concentrations points as being on a "comparatively large scale."

The bombers struck shortly after dark. Calais was severely hit and the raid there continued with unbroken intensity despite heavy anti-aircraft fire.

Several big fires blazed up quickly, the witnesses said.

The Germans raided the Bristol Channel area Saturday night but Sunday was comparatively quiet.

(The Bristol raid seemingly was another in the apparent German plan to smash if possible all ports at which British aid from the United States might be delivered.)

The air and home security ministries said a number of fires were started in the Bristol Channel area and some damage was done to commercial buildings and houses.

"The number of casualties reported was small but included people killed," the communique added.

A bomber cruising off the French west coast sank a German antisubmarine vessel off the Loire River Estuary with a single bomb, the air ministry news service announced.

A German Junkers 88 bomber was reported shot down by fighter planes near Middlesborough, East Yorkshire.

A district in northern Scotland was attacked but no casualties were reported.

The air and home security ministries said few enemy aircraft flew inland but there had been some activity off the east and west coasts.

The air ministry also declared a supply ship and an antiaircraft vessel were bombed and machine-gunned by British bombers in attacks on shipping off the Dutch coast.

French Guns Fire On British Ships

native population of Algeria.)

Today's action in the western Mediterranean was the first clash between Great Britain and her former ally since the abortive attempt by Gen. Charles de Gaulle to capture Dakar with the aid of the British fleet last September.

Interception Ordered

According to the admiralty, British officials at Gibraltar had received reports that a convoy of four merchant vessels carrying important war material for Germany, and escorted by a French destroyer, was due to pass through the Strait of Gibraltar, and they had issued orders that it be intercepted. The convoy, however, passed through the strait in Spanish territorial waters, making it impossible for the British to interfere with it.

The British naval craft followed the convoy and caught up with it after it had left Spanish waters. The British ordered the convoy to stop for a visit and search. At this point the shore batteries opened up.

"His Majesty's ships, though merely engaged in the exercise of normal belligerent rights, were compelled to reply in their own defense and hits were observed on the shore batteries," the Admiralty's communique said.

It added that, in view of the action of the French batteries, the British vessels would have been fully justified in firing on the French merchant ships and their escorts, but did not do so "in the interests of humanity."

It was admitted in informed quarters here tonight that Adolf Hitler's undercover efforts to have France openly defy Britain's blockade, and thus bring about clashes with the British navy, had borne fruit, and that Admiral Jean Darlan's recent threat to use French naval craft to escort convoys to unoccupied France to break through the blockade had been carried out.

Had Right to Search Ships

Authoritative quarters here said Britain had full right under international law to visit and search ships passing through her blockade. It has been well known for some time that French merchant ships have been carrying important raw materials into France, from where they have been transported in Germany for her war effort.

The ministry of economic warfare knew for certain that one of the four ships which passed through the strait this morning carried a cargo of rubber from Bangkok, Thailand (Siam), it was said here.

There was no doubt that this vitally necessary war material would find its way immediately across the Rhine. It was considered a strange reflection of French policy that French guns should have thought it fit to fire on British vessels while other elements of the British navy were busy at the other end of the Mediterranean, administering a crushing defeat to the naval forces of Italy, with whom the French are still technically at war.

The clash was regarded here as particularly untimely in view of Britain's recent notification that she was willing to abrogate her rights under international law to permit the passage of foodstuffs from America to occupied France.

Victims of British Victory in Mediterranean

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS.

ON THE BOTTOM—The admiralty announced yesterday that British naval action in the Mediterranean had resulted in the sinking of the Italian cruisers Zara (top) and Fiume (bottom). Another cruiser, the Pola, and two Italian destroyers also were sunk, according to the announcement the question of why the Italians permitted themselves to be trapped. The possibility of German pressure on the Italians to take to the sea is discussed and also the likelihood that Admiral Cunningham employed brilliant strategy to entice them to battle.

It is the common opinion here that Mussolini's fighting force in his "Mare Nostrum" has been reduced to a skeletal condition. Since she entered the war on June 10, Italy has lost one battleship, six cruisers, 12 destroyers and about 25 submarines.

As yet little is known about how the battle developed. Apparently the Italians were sighted Friday, when the British commander harried them with aircraft while bringing up his ships. The Italians scattered, thereby turning the engagement from an old-style fleet action into something resembling a naval dogfight.

First Reports Uncertain

Early reports failed to indicate the attack's scale and this is attributed either to poor visibility or darkness—with the latter more probable in the central Mediterranean at this season. Later reports showed the same uncertainty, suggesting that the battle was sprawled out over such an extensive area, perhaps running into Saturday, that decisive details were hard to ascertain. The admiral's announcement of no losses in men or ships confirms the belief that the situation is cleaned up now.

All three Italian cruisers reported sunk by the British were vessels of an overall length of 599.5 feet. Each carried eight 8-inch guns, 12 3.9-inch guns, as well as 10 37-mm. and 8 13-mm. antiaircraft guns. None was equipped with torpedo tubes, but each carried a caterpult-launched aircraft.

One of the Oriani class of destroyers, the 1,729-ton Vincenzo Gioberti, carried a crew of 157. Her armament included four 4.7-inch guns, eight 37-mm. and four 13-mm. antiaircraft guns, and six 21-inch torpedo tubes.

The Maestrale was a 1,449-ton vessel with a rated speed of 38 knots and a normal crew of 153.

British Press On Diredawa; Italians Flee

By the Associated Press

Cairo, March 30.—The British forces in astern Ethiopi whipped up their advance on Diredawa today as reports, confirmed in an Italian communique, rached Cairo that the Fascists had abandoned the city and were retreating westward toward Addis Ababa.

Diredawa, with a population of 30,000, stands in a crook of the Addis Ababa-Djibuti Railway, some 35 miles north of the ancint walled Mohammedan city of Harar, which fell to the British last week.

The railway is the only one linking the Ethiopian capital with the sea.

To the northwest the British in Eritrea were marking up similar successs, a communque said, as they pursued the Italians from Cheren to Asmara, the capital, in a drive to the Red Sea, where thy would virtually encircle the Italians in Ethiopia.

3,775 Prisoners Seized

"So far we have captured 3,775 prisoners, including 68 officers, together with a number of guns," the communique said of the chase to Asmara.

Thus, military observers said, the British were in a fair way of succeeding in their conquest of Premier Mussolini's East African empire before the torrential equatorial rains set in in May.

The advance on both fronts was accompanied by heavy aerial attacks by the R. A. F., the South African air force and the Free French air squadron. The Addis Ababa-Djibuti railroad, motor transports, troops and buildings in the various areas were bombed and machine-gunned.

(The Rome communique said British pressure in Eritrea was being "courageously held in check by our counterattacks" and announced the withdrawal of Italian forces from Diredawa without explanation save that the men were "taking up new positions to the west.")

The distance by rail from Diredawa to Addis Ababa is more than 200 miles.

Forces Converge on Capital

The British troops in this area moved north from Italian Somaliland early this month after conquering that section. Two other columns which left Mega and Dolo and took Neghelli a week ago are also moving on Addis Ababa, while in the west other troops were advancing in the Gondar region, north of Lake Tana.

The communique which told of the advance on Diredawa said Italian resistance was being "brushed aside and a number of prisoners with equipment have been taken."

These dispatches said the Italians fired several shells, then fell back leaving behind hundreds of rifles and mules, and thousands of rounds of ammunition.

The Freee French squadron took part in the raid on the Italian encampment between Gondar and Asmara, demolishing military buildinngs, the communique declared.

Greece.

Informed persons believe that a great attack on Albania is due in a short time. Today there was widespread aerial bombardment on the northern Albanian fighting sectors by British and Greek planes and already reports are filtered across Lake Ochrid that the damage has been unusually serious.

Watchers from this side of the Greek frontier saw detachments of British motorized units moving in the vicinity of Albania. Yugosla forces in the region running north and south from here are practically on a war footing. There is little difference in the war-like atmosphere visible when one crosses the border from belligerent Greece to neutral Yugoslavia.

Belgrade to Set Time

The timing of the anticipated developments seems to depend largely on Belgrade, which is still adjusting itself to the swift change from a pro-Axis neutrality to what is beginning to seem like a pro-Allied non-belligerency. The guess of most people is that it will still be a week or perhaps a month before things begin to happen.

Observers in this garrison town believe that further heavy aerial bombardments of the beleaguered Italians will precede the attack and that Yugoslavia needs a short space of time to complete mobilization.

Among army officers there is little doubht that Yugoslavia will pitch in against the Italians and enthusiasm for the idea is evident. Already there are several Greek officers in southern Yugoslavia acting in a liaison capacity, and British observers have been traveling to and from Belgrade and Athens.

South of the Greek-Yugoslav border today this writer met a British general inspecting the terrain.

Feel Albania Is Doomed

The impression on both sides of the frontier is that Albania is doomed no matter what Germany does and that the British fleet will see to it that the Italian army does not get away. It will take some mighty clever German thinking to prevent this disaster for her ally and the general impression is that the Germans are not in a military position to stave it off.

A German attack on Yugoslavia necessitates considerable alterations in the present bulk and dispositions of the army which was getting ready for a sweep to the Aegean Sea. This takes time whereas most of the Greek and southern Yugoslav armies are in place. It is believed by well informed persons that despite the inevitability of an eventual heavy German attack which may well result in the temporary loss of much of northern Yugoslavia, Albania will be cleaned out with dispatch.

Although Allied censorship in Greece has so far prevented the publication of this news, while there was a British army there, the writer feels he is giving away no secret by mentioning it since it has been written about so much from elsewhere. While naturally the numbers of forces and their disposition cannot be mentioned, and one may say only that Athens has been the scene of a paraded military might for weeks, the Allied ranks, which have now been increased, are constantly rumbling along with convoys of trucks, trailers, gun-carriers and tanks. Not only are English-language sign posts becoming commonplace but the entire population had adopted the cockney thumb-up salute.

This army is mobile and adds to the already established diversified bases. It is constantly growing despite Italian attacks on secret convoys both from Egypt and England. It is full of fight and as one British officer told this writer over a cup of tea in a Greek mountain pass this afternoon:

"This time we are here to stay. There will be no retreat from the Continent."

Now that the Yugoslav army is openly and considerably more hostile than it is amenable to the Reich, and the Yugoslav railroads obviously are not available, any German attack through Bulgaria has become extremely difficult. Even if they should try—and it is very possible the Nazis could still penetrate to the Aegean—it would risk disastrous results.

Getting through the Metaxas Line is far from inconceivable, but the Germans once in Salonika would be flanked on one side by the British and Greeks—600,000 of whom would be released by the elimination of Albania—and further north by the Yugoslavs, and on the other side by the Turks who now have reason to adopt a more active line of policy.

It is reported tonight that the Yugoslavs have banned German military shipments down the Danube and even if this news is not correct it is probably imminent. This throws the burden of material shipments from the Reich on the Rumanian, Hungarian and Polish railroads which have already frequently cracked under the strain of commercial traffic.

Although quantities of material naturally are in Rumania and Bulgaria already, to keep the war going more must come and keep coming. The only rail link from Rumania to Bulgaria is across the Cernavoda Bridge. Bulgarian railroads are bad and only touch a tiny tip of eastern Greece.

The British are hard put to supply their ally entirely by sea and over the weak roads and railroad networks of Greece and Yugoslavia.

Sub Skipper Tells of Sinking 2 Italian Ships

By Larry Allen
Associated Press Staff Writer

Aboard the British Submarine Parthian With the British Mediterranean Fleet, March 30.—The British submarine Parthian torpedoed two heavily laden Italian supply ships in a daring daylight attack on an enemy convoy near the edge of Italy's toe.

Creeping within close range in the Straits of Messina, the Parthian banged away with torpedoes into a convoy of three ships and an escorting sloop, shoving two projectiles each into two vessels.

The sharp metallic clang of torpedoes striking the sides of a 6,000-ton supply ship and a 10,000-oil tanker was followed by heavy explosions which started the vessels toward the bottom of the sea.

(The admiralty last Friday announced the Parthian hit the two ships with torpedoes. The communique added they were not seen to sink as the Parthian took instant action to avoid counterattack by the Italians' escort vessels, but "the sound of the engines of both ships ceased abruptly.")

Plunged to Safety

The Parthian plunged toward the bottom to escape depth charges dropped by the convoy's escort sloop and antisubmarine motorboats.

The skipper, Commander M. C. Rimington, D. S. O., said the Italians chased his craft six hours before giving up. Some depth charges, he said, came "too close for comfort."

Commander Rimington said the convoy was going north at the time of the attack, apparently headed for Albania.

The 6,000-ton vessel carried a large deck cargo of fresh-cut timber.

The Parthian, already credited with sinking one Italian submarine off Tobruk, Libya, and three merchantmen and scoring a hit on one Italian cruiser, launched her torpedoes at less than a mile distance when the convoy was rounding Italy's toe in the straits.

"The convoy came out of the straits in staggered fashion, leaving just enough gaps between the ships to make an excellent torpedo target," Commander Rimington said.

Hunted by Foe

"The convoy was just reforming and tightening up the gap under the protection of the sloop when we got the range and shoved three torpedoes at each of the two largest convoyed ships.

"A squadron of antisubmarine motor boats joined the sloop in the hunt for us within 20 minutes after the first torpedo smashed. Two out of the three torpedoes aimed at each of the two ships found the mark with a heavy metallic clang on the hull of the ships and then a loud explosion.

"The Italians quickly counter-attacked and depth charges burst all around us.

"All charges were very quick and too close for comfort. We kept submerging and moving away from where we launched the attack but the sloop and antisubmarine boats kept hunting us for six hours before giving up the chase."

Envoy Leaves Turkey

Ankara, Turkey, March 30 (AP).—The Yugoslav Ambassador left tonight for Belgrade where, it was understood, he had been recalled for consultation.

He saw Turkish Foreign Minister Saracoglu yesterday, and was believed to have talked with President Inonu.

Saracoglu Reported on Trip

New York, March 30 (AP).—The Budapest radio tonight broadcast an announcement that Turkish Foreign Minister Saracoglu has left Ankara for Belgrade, to "enter into negotiations" with the Yugoslav government. No further details were given. The broadcast was heard by N. B. C.

Athens Communique

Athens, March 30 (AP).—A Greek general headquarters communique today reported "intense patrol and artillery activity" at the Albanian front and said prisoners had been taken.

The communique added:

"Our aviation bombed successfully enemy munitions depots which exploded and started to burn. All our aircraft returned safely."

man minister, Victor von Heeren.

Von Heeren's wife was planning to leave immediately for Vienna by special railroad car, but it was not indicated the minister himself intended to leave.

Trains of 10 and 12 cars were departing almost hourly toward the north, loaded with Germans and Italians.

Streams of German evacuees were pouring into Belgrade from the south with truckloads of baggage, animals and other possessions.

One of the last stories sent out of the country by German correspondents contained this statement which they said the Yugoslav premier, Gen. Dusan Simovic, had made to the Italian minister:

"Yugoslavia is not going to be enclosed. If the Germans go to Salonika, the Yugoslavs must get to the sea by way of Albania."

Yugoslav official circles said there was absolutely no confirmation of this report.

Von Heeren held an early morning conference with Foreign Minister Momtchilo Nincic, whose position was termed "very vague" by German circles who have been demanding to know the definite attitude of the new government of King Peter toward the pact of alliance with the Axis which caused last week's government upheaval.

[The United Press reported that von Heeren had demanded clarification within 24 hours of Yugoslavia's stand toward the tri-power pact.]

One German ventured that "Yugoslavia has decided to keep herself completely neutral and adhere to the three-power pact because the new government has discovered that even the secret clauses (of the pact) do not threaten Yugoslavia's independence; but no formula has yet been found to make this clear to the public."

Another German version of the Yugoslav delay in announcing her policy was that a Bulgarian problem exists, and "Belgrade is afraid that as in 1913 and again in 1915 Bulgaria will come into conflict with Yugoslavia, with Germany playing the role of protector of Bulgaria's claims on Yugoslavia."

Yugoslavia gained some Bulgarian territory as a result of the World War.

German correspondents continued to report that the Croat peasant leader, Vladimir Macek, was still awaiting clarification of the government's foreign policy before giving it his support, but the Belgrade press declared Croat and Serb relations were more firmly established than ever.

Macek has been reported holding out for a guarantee that Croatian aspirations for greater autonomy will not be jeopardized by the new government, and that the Axis pact will be fulfilled. Croatia, in the north, would be subject to the greatest force of any Italian and German offensive.

The exodus of Germans was ordered by the legation. Those going to Bulgaria were instructed to leave by way of Hungary and Rumania "because of the danger of crossing the Yugoslav-Bulgarian frontier." This was not explained.

Yesterday all Serbia was ordered cleared of German nationals, but today the legation expanded the order to include Croatia and Slovenia.

Vans and automobiles lined the streets at the legation. Twelve hundred Germans were leaving Belgrade alone.

More thousands were quitting the rest of the country, including those in Croatia and Slovenia who were crossing the frontier without coming to Belgrade.

A caravan of more than 50 automobiles was readied to leave for the Hungarian frontier tomorrow morning.

All members of German diplomats' families, and even the representatives of the official German news agency, were ordered out of the country.

A special train Monday night was expected to take the last of the Axis nationals.

to no one," Sir Robert asserted, "but is a great stabilizing force and influence for peace."

The commander-in-chief said it was a cause of satisfaction that the situation in other war theaters was so favorable that Britain not only was able to spare forces from the United Kingdom but also could transport them such a distance despite the Axis' sea and air warfare.

A ministry of information communique described the newly-arrived army units as "probably the most highly trained troops stationed in Malaya," many of them veterans of action in France, and the airmen as veteran fighter pilots of the Battle of Britain last summer and autumn.

Indian army units constituted the major portion of Malaya's latest manpower reinforcements. They included men from all parts and all races of India as well as representatives of the personal forces of several Indian princes.

"It was good to know that we have in Malaya the same happy combination of British, Australians and Indians which a few weeks ago crushed Mussolini's pretensions to be the ruler of North Africa," said Sir Shenton Thomas, governor of the Straits Settlements.

Despite the outside reinforcements, Malaya is not shirking its defense responsibilities, the governor declared, announcing a decision to raise an additional battalion or the Malaya regiment—regulars recruited locally under British officers.

Steelman entered the conferences yesterday in what was termed an "exploratory capacity." He said he would report to his superiors in Washington today.

Cement Strike Threatens

A dispute affecting 10,000 workers in cement mills throughout Pennsylvania's Lehigh Valley and in New York, New Jersey and Maryland neared the strike stage as officers of the United Cement, Lime and Gypsum Workers International Union (A. F. L.) were granted power in a secret election to call a walkout.

The strike was authorized, said a union spokesman, because the various cement companies refused to grant the union's demand for an hourly wage increase of 12 cents.

Millions of barrels of cement are being turned out in the plants for various defense projects.

Confer 12 Hours

The encouraging news from the Vanadium panel of the Defense Mediation Board here came after Sabbath conferences with the management and union officials that began at 10 a. m. and lasted until 10 p. m.

The strike, precipitated by the hiring of five nonunion guards at the Pennsylvania plant, involves only 225 men, but officials said it was of great importance because the company produces material needed by a number of big defense contractors.

The company makes ferro-vanadium, an ingredient of alloy steel used in building destroyers.

The mediation panel consists of Dr. Frank P. Graham, representing the public; Thomas Kennedy, laborer, and Roger D. Lapham, industry. Eugene Meyer, an employer member of the board, acted as volunteer mediator yesterday though he had not been assigned to the case.

"Solidarity Forever" Sung

During the Chicago meeting at which they voted to return to work, International Harvester Co. strikers sang "Solidarity Forever" and "Hang Old McCormick to a Sour Apple Tree," but the majority greeted back-to-work speechmakers with cheers.

Affected by the vote were the McCormick & Deering tractor works at Chicago, with 14,000 employes; a plant at Richmond, Ind., with 1,200 employes, and a small plant at Rock Falls, Ill., with 250 workers.

Union spokesmen hailed the settlement as "a great moral victory." Company officials said they had agreed to no concessions permitting union recognition at plants where contracts are not in effect, nor to readjustment of working conditions.

"We accepted the proposal of the Defense Mediation Board to reopen our plants as soon as possible," they said.

The five-man panel designated to handle the International Harvester case today consists of C. A. Dykstra, for the public; Phillip Murray (or Thomas Kennedy) and George M. Harrison, for labor, and Walter C. Teagle and Eugene Meyer, for industry.

Effigy Dumped in River

End of the Bethlehem Steel strike at Johnstown was signalized by Steel Workers Organizing Committee (C. I. O.) members, who dumped a figure symbolizing the Employes Representative Plan into the Conemaugh River.

The demonstration followed a rank-and-file ratification of a four-point agreement negotiated with Bethlehem officials by officers of the S. W. O. C. at 2:30 a. m.

Terms of the settlement were the same as those for ending a four-day strike at the company's parent plant at Bethlehem, Pa., Friday.

Artisans Return to Jobs

Like their brothers at Bethlehem, the Johnstown workers walked out in protest against an election of officers on company property by the employes representation plan, which the S. W. O. C. charges is a company union.

Despite a C. I. O. United Automobile Workers Union vote to continue the 68-day-old strike until union security is granted, groups of artisans resumed the back-to-work movement at the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co. plant without incident.

While the company normally does not operate on Sunday, the employers called back between 150 and 200 men at double time wages to prepare groundwork for resumption of work on $45,000,000 worth of defense orders. Pickets jeered, but there was no disturbance. The company expects to resume regular operations today, in compliance with orders of Secretary of the Navy Knox and Defense Chief Knudsen.

At Cleveland, Ohio, the National Labor Relations Board announced that the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. would pay $170,000 for full settlement of employes' labor claims resulting from the C. I. O.'s 1937 steel strike.

troubles.

The Smith resolution is in the Rules Committee, of which he is a member. In the past, this committee has shown a disposition to report legislation favored by Smith and others in the committee who are regarded as of one mind concerning labor matters.

During the week the Senate is expected to take up the $4,389,000,000 fifth supplemental defense bill. It carries funds for many defense activities, including 4,750 new Army bombers and equipment for an Army of 4,000,000 men.

Few items are in controversy. But one of the provisions is likely to stir up a debate. This is over the deletion of a ban, which almost was adopted by the Senate, against the purchase of Argentine canned beef by the Army. Any bar to such purchases has been opposed by the State Department, which holds that it would endanger hemispheric solidarity, and the reciprocal trade program so far as it affects South America.

Another measure the Senate likely will consider is the $1,340,000,000 appropriation bill for the Agriculture Department for 1942.

There are other odds and ends which, because of amendment in one House or the other, must be attended to during the week. But these are relatively minor, and are usually disposed of quickly.

The House program is extremely light, due to the speed with which it has acted upon regular appropriation bills and the defense measures.

Representative Martin, of Massachusetts, the minority leader, announced today the recreation of the Republican Agricultural Study Committee, under the chairmanship of Representative Hope, of Kansas. Its purpose is to explore remedies for agriculture and these times particularly "to see to . . . that grave dangers which face American agriculture will not be obscured and neglected in the false and temporary boom conditions of national defense and war activities."

Martin said:

"The gravity of the many conditions involved in the depressed and unhappy condition of American agriculture at the outbreak of hostilities abroad has been tremendously increased by these foreign wars. The factors which have operated to reduce agriculture to its present plight have arisen from conditions which extend not only through the economic structure of America but of the whole world.

"Some of these conditions have been due to alterations in the mode of life and habits of entire peoples, including those of America, and are permanent. Other factors involve loss of foreign markets; danger of agriculture being 'squeezed' between opposing conditions arising from defense and war work; increasing disparity between agricultural and other prices; rising costs of farm production and scarcity of farm labor; rising taxes, and the very grave condition of deflation which will be sure to strike what could be a fatal blow at American agriculture when the defense activities cease and the wars end unless careful and sound plans for cushioning that shock are made far in advance of the time when the blow comes."

10,000 Soldiers to Play War In the Dark Wednesday

By the Associated Press

Fort Benning, Ga., March 30.—Ten thousand men and 2,000 vehicles will roll across country in blackout maneuvers Wednesday night in simulated combat testing the Second armored division, the Army's newest mechanized fighting force.

Moving into a concealed bivouac on the vast military reservation, the division is to conduct all supply and service operations and troop movements entirely without lights or exposure to "observation" by an imaginary enemy. Then, under cover of darkness, the armored units will move swiftly into position for a drive on the "Red," or invading, army, which is assumed to be engaged with defending forces along a general line between Atlanta and Montgomery, Ala.

Engineero units will span two streams with both heavy and light pontoon structures to bring the division into "advanced position" after a theoretical lightning march from a concentration area in Florida.

The maneuvers will culminate Thursday morning in a march to a reviewing field for presentation of a mounted review for Maj. Gen. Adna R. Chaffee, of Fort Knox, Ky., commander of the armored force, and Brig. Gen. George S. Patton, jr., commanding officer of the Second Armored Division.

Army headquarters said one of the purposes of the overnight military problem was to test two newly-developed rations under field conditions. One of these, known as ration "C," is a canned ration including meat, vegetables, bread, sugar and soluble coffee. The second, known as ration "D", is an emergency provision of chocolate, intended for use only as a last resort in battle. Unit commanders are to deliver reports on the suitability of both rations.

The morning review is to be a high-speed demonstration of maneuverability. The mass of vehicles, including thousands of men in trucks, hundreds of tanks, dozens of motor-drawn artillery pieces and scores of motorcycles and scout cars, is scheduled to move over the half-mile parade ground in 45 minutes.

Wallace Urges Unity to Save 'Sacred' Rights

By the Associated Press

Chicago, March 30.—Vice President Wallace declared tonight that "We of the Americas, North and South and Central, must band together to maintain the sacred essence of democracy and religion."

"We must not allow a 'Gestapo' or 'Cheka' to get a foothold anywhere in this hemisphere," he asserted in a written address at the national triennial convention of B'nai B'rith, Jewish service and fraternal organization. The speech was carried by the Columbia Broadcasting System and rebroadcast in Spanish to other republics of the Americas.

"We must remember that if England loses, the Nazi scheme of things will, unless proper safeguards are taken, come into control within less than a year in certain of the Latin-American republics," he said, adding:

"It must be remembered that when Nazi control takes place no one at any time or any place is safe against imprisonment, degradation, torture and death."

The Vice President declared that "the minorities are always needed either as a ferment or for other purposes."

"To those nations which best learn the art of reconciling minority differences will belong the future of the world."

The Nazis, he said, used "unspeakable" methods in their efforts "to eliminate the Jews completely in all of Europe."

"One of the strong reasons why all of us in the New World believe so strongly in hemispheric solidarity for defense purposes is because we know the Nazis look on most of us as belonging to what they call an inferior race."

War Would Bring Fascism To U. S., Hutchins Predicts

By the Associated Press

Chicago, March 30.—Robert Maynard Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, said today that America should fight now if President Roosevelt's recent remarks about "total victory" over "the enemy" mean that the British, Chinese and Greeks "are our allies."

"If this is so," he said, "it is immoral to let them die for us while we sit safely at home. We should have been in the war from the start."

Asserting there was a chance that the President's remarks were for foreign consumption, Hutchins said that Mr. Roosevelt was mistaken if he was moving toward war with "the conviction that the people want him to."

And, he added, if the United States were "to proceed through total war to total victory over totalitarian states, it will have to become totalitarian, too. . . .

"If we are actually to press on to total victory, we must fight. We are not justified in hoping that the Axis will suffer total defeat without full American participation in the war."

Hutchins spoke at the regular Sunday morning service in Rockefeller Memorial Chapel at the university. The address was carried by the Mutual Broadcasting System.

"The country wants to defend itself, aid Britain, and stay out of war," he declared. "We have been told over and over again that we could do just that. . . . The passage of this (Lease-Lend) bill gave the President no mandate for war. The people want peace."

Then he added, rhetorically: "If we go to war, what are we going to war for? . . .

"We cannot use the word democracy to describe every country that it or may be at war with the Axis. If Russia is attacked by Germany, will she be welcomed into the choir of the democracies? . . .

"We are stirred, but not enlightened, by the great phrase—The Four Freedoms—which the President has used as the general statement of our aims. Freedom of worship, freedom of speech, freedom from want and freedom from fear—if we go to war, we go to establish these four freedoms everywhere.

"The President cannot literally mean that we are to fight on till the four freedoms ring everywhere. . . . Mr. Roosevelt must mean that by defeating the Axis we shall rid the world of those governments at present most aggressive in their attack on the four freedoms.

"If we enter this war, we shall lose what we have of the four freedoms. We shall lose the hope of realizing them. What we have, in this country, is hope. War, for this country, is a counsel of despair. It is a confession of failure. It is national suicide."

Morgenthau Asks Banks to Report On U. S. Holdings

Secretary Morgenthau called yesterday for detailed monthly reports by banks and insurance companies of their holdings of securities issued or guaranteed by the United States.

In a letter to 6,500 bankers and 1,000 insurance executives, the Treasury head said that such reports were necessary to facilitate the defense financing program.

The data is not obtainable from present Treasury records, he said, explaining that it was wanted for his "confidential use."

Hunger, Death Shadow China Torn by War

By Douglas Robertson.

Shanghai, March 30.—Shanghai today has her "four horsemen"—hunger, terroristic activities, strikes and death.

Since the outbreak of hostilities in 1937, even after the actual tides of the war were no longer washing Shanghai's mellow but muddy Whangpo River, the cost of living, in fact the cost of mere subsistence, has been increasing not only weekly, but practically daily. At present the lower-bracket Chinese employes, such as wharf, rickshaw and cart coolies, find it impossible on their meager earnings to purchase sufficient food. Single members manage to eke out a smattering livelihood while those with families find themselves faced with starvation and frequent visits to grasping pawnshops. Some eventually sink into a life of crime.

Rice, the most staple food of the Chinese, today is so expensive that thousands cannot afford it. Now, it has become a luxury with other grains beyond their pocketbooks, and even the purchase of the cheapest vegetables requires considerable budget balancing and much caustic bargaining at any of the Chinese markets where Chinese housewives deal.

Future Dark

Shanghai has, more or less, withstood the hard winter yet all indications point to more serious conditions if not immediately surely within the near future. Throughout the winter literally thousands of dead bodies were picked up in Shanghai's streets every morning to be buried or cremated by the various Chinese benevolent societies. And, although warmer weather is approaching, the nightly death toll of those who have succumbed to starvation and malnutrition hardly lessens. The sight of a dead body stretched out on one of Shanghai's main thoroughfares, usually stripped of clothing by other unfortunates and possibly covered by a thin grass mat, is no longer an item for conversation. Such sights are too common.

Various societies, foreign and Chinese, are trying to relieve this poverty, assisted by Shanghai, but the promblem seems unsolvable. Hospitals refuse to accept patients who show symptoms of undernourishment and are unable to pay for treatments. Shanghai's jails are filled with Chinese who took part in crimes because jail sentences are accompanied by food.

There have been many strikes, not only in small Chinese-owned factories but also on the street car and bus lines in the International Settlement and French Concession. Several strikes led to violence.

Some Hopeful

Middle-class Chinese are banking on to whatever jobs they have, hoping that eventually the prices of food, especially their favorite rice, and rents will return to pre-war levels.

Many Chinese and foreigners have taken advantage of disturbed conditions in Shanghai and surrounding areas to make large profits. Chinese are bitter against such countrymen. Those who frequent the numerous cabarets, cafes and night clubs are branded as rice and grain hoarders—"rice worms" is the Chinese term.

Chinese hatred is directed first against Chinese profiteers rather than against the Japanese although the Japanese since 1937 have been the main cause of the present trouble in Shanghai and the Yangtze Valley. The Japanese buying up everything produced in the Yangtze Valley, offering such high prices that Chinese dealers cannot resist.

In Shanghai there are thousands of Japanese agents who have "contacts" and are able to supply to foreign agents such necessaries as pigs, beef, egg products, rice, beans and bean oil which are exported to Hongkong, Singapore, Germany and other countries, while Shanghai goes hungry.

Shanghai's hinterland has sufficient food for the city yet the profit is made by Japanese speculators with "official connections" who seek quick profits rather than the establishment of enduring enterprises.

Communists Active

Communist agents have enrolled numerous Chinese workers and it is reported Shanghai's strikes have had a communistic background. Communists have been engaging able-bodied men whose living standards are under subsistence levels as recruits for various guerilla forces operating around Shanghai.

The Communist agents are reported to be fomenting strikes and terrorism aimed at the Chungking and Nanking regimes. Numerous starving Chinese are willing to become partisans of Chungking, Nanking, Communists or the Japanese as long as their rice bowl is filled.

Nanking financial circles hope Chungking will cancel its order outlawing the Wang Ching-Wei regime's currency and allow this currency and Chungking currency to circulate on equal footing. The currency dispute was the major cause of recent attacks, bombings and kidnapings by both sides with Nanking striking first in most cases.

The Nanking regime was said to fear severe reprisals by Chungking agents, so it imprisoned more than 10 employes of Chungking-controlled banks as hostages. Unofficial talks are proceeding between Chungking and Nanking in an attempt to end the terrorism and make the currencies of both factions acceptable at least for international transactions.

An agreement between Wang Ching-Wei's banks and the Japanese specified that the new Nanking currency and the Japanese military yen be interchangeable at the rate of approximately 150 military yen for 100 of Nanking's yuan. The military yen will be gradually withdrawn, leaving the field clear for Nanking's currency.

Most of Nanking's new currency remains in Nanking banks because nobody is willing to accept it. In Shanghai and throughout the countryside the Japanese military yen, supported by Japanese bayonets, is considered the only "safe" medium of exchange. The Japanese banned the circulation of Chungking bank notes in all areas outside Shanghai.

The promised exchange rate of the military yen against the new Nanking currency is not maintained. The rate has been steadily increasing until approximately 250 yuan in Nanking or Chungking currencies is necessary for 100 military yen.

If War Should Come

U. S. to Be Educated in Air-Raid Precautions By Booklets Due for Publication Soon

By Hilton H. Parsley.

New York, March 30.—The first of a series of booklets on airraid precautions, roughly similar to those brought out in England before and since the war, will soon be published here by the Council of National Defense, perhaps within a week.

It was prepared by the War Department in collaboration with the National Technological Civil Protection Committee. Its subject is "Protective Construction." Other booklets on blackouts, fire protection, etc., are scheduled for rapid release.

For the benefit of practicing American civil engineers, more than any other professional group concerned with measures of passive defense against air raids, criteria "for design against stupendous impact and explosion" are set forth in this initial paper. Their treatment has been empirical rather than theoretical. No comparable American data has previous been available. Criticism of the text was undertaken by the American Society of Civil Engineers. It is therefore regarded as a satisfactory guide for the application of engineering judgment.

Not Solely up to Army

Until last spring the protection of civilians in wartime, apart from their evacuation, had been considered a responsibility of the Army. A year ago, however, a civil defense branch of G-3, the operation and training division of the general staff, was established.

War Department recognition that air raid precaution measures are essentially civilian problems, subject to solution nationally and locally through civlian initiative but with Army help and guidance, followed immediately.

The National Technological Committee, which has no contact with the public and no authority, was appointed by the Secretary of War. According to its chairman, Walter D. Binger, commissioner of borough works, Manhattan, its primary function is to evaluate information for the War Department. Air-raid shelters, water supply collection and distribution, sewage treatment and refuse disposal, camouflage, population movement, protection of illuminating gas and electric plants and distributing systems are being studied.

Engineers Help

In close cooperation with the War Department's committee is the American Society of Civil Engineers, national committee on civilian protection in wartime, of which Binger is also chairman. It has direct contact with the public, maintained through 64 local sections organized more than 80 years ago by the American society, for social as well as professional activities.

Fifty-two of these section have appointed parallel committees of six men each. Hence 312 engineers are actually at work on such complex problems as structures, transportation, sanitary and public health engineering, power, emergency control, sabotage and local application. Ernest P. Goodrich, of New York, is the national vice chairman.

While official organization of airraid precaution measures has finally been accomplished under War Department guidance, it is admitted that the whole business is still in the "thought and discussion" stage —that action and its sinews, funds, are in prospect merely. Delay is inherent, the experts explain. Temptation to make the dirt fly has been deliberately resisted because, as one puts it, "the subject is an aggregate of details which can be set forth only when they have been marshaled in volume."

In other States plans are as yet neither standardized nor coordinated. In addition to municipal agencies comparable to Mayor La Guardia's board of disaster control, and the fire and police departments of the larger cities, numerous voluntary organizations have entered the field. The list is growing.

The American Legion, in cooperation with the air defense command, expects to participate in passive as well as active defense. The report of its London delegation will be issued within ten days.

The American Medical Association, working with the council of national defense, is dealing with morale as well as the purely medical aspects of the problem. The ARP section of the American woman's voluntary services is developing an elaborate national program under the guidance of the fire department here. The Regional Plan Association has completed a preliminary survey of available shelter —for the victims of air raids—within a radius of City Hall, New York.

At the Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, a student air raid shelter course is in full swing. A Government sponsored course is also open to professional architects and engineers at night. New York University's College of Engineering offers courses in the design of future structures, and in the modification of those already built.

These are merely indications of the extent of the activities from which the Nation soon may benefit.

C. C. Briggs, head of the architecture department of the Pratt Institute, forecasts that the striking power of aircraft, as demonstrated in the war, will affect architectural trends for a century, even as the discovery of gun powder produced "huge walls." The Government, he adds, soon must recognize "the decentralizing movement for housing and planning as well as industry." It has not yet done so.

Early in March Mayor La Guardia, as chairman of the United States Conference of Mayors, sought an appropriation of $150,000,000 in Washington for allocation to cities on the Atlantic seaboard. He argued that their defense measures should be part of the national defense and should not be considered as purely local undertakings.

For reasons he has not seen fit to disclose to the press, his further plans, said to be both elaborate and dramatic, remain an official secret. Speculation includes total blackouts of Greater New York in the near future.

U. S. Drained By British Aid, Wheeler Says

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, declared last night that aid to Britain had drained the United States of defense materials until "we are less prepared today than we were a year ago."

The charge came during a radio debate on convoying war materials to England, with Wheeler and Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, taking the negative against Maj. Gen. John F. O'Ryan, wartime A. E. F. divisional commander, and Joseph Clark Baldwin, newly elected Republican Representative from New York.

Baldwin, who won election on an aid-to-Britain platform in which convoying was a plank, asserted the war materials must be delivered "or the whole policy of Atlantic defense to which we are committed fails and fails hideously."

He proposed convoys "at least halfway across . . . like we did in the last war."

Wheeler said he had followed President Roosevelt in the Chief Executive's avowed determination to prepare against invasion, "but we have failed."

"Very Few" Combat Planes

The United States, he said, has "very, very few combat planes that are fit to go to Europe to fight" and "we shouldn't declare war or go into war when we're not prepared."

Both he and Fish said the convoy proposal meant war, and President Roosevelt and Secretary of the Navy Knox were quoted as saying the same thing.

Wheeler described agitation for convoys as "an act of betrayal," declaring assurances had been given by proponents of the lend-lease bill that such was not their intent.

He said America was headed for "a similar tragedy" to the crucifixion of Christ: "The American people are being betrayed into the arms of the warlords by the American Judases . . . Today the betrayal, tomorrow the crucifixion."

The leader of the isolationists also repeated a quotation attributed to Prime Minister Churchill after the last war, which Churchill and others have repudiated, that if the United States had stayed at home and "minded their own business," England would have made an earlier peace.

Calls Policy Hypocrisy

Wheeler said Baldwin's proposal to convoy materials halfway across the Atlantic was "hyprocisy—just like our foreign policy so far."

He declared: "You say let's convoy them part way across and once you get them part way across you're going to take them all the way across."

Fish said he did not believe reports that the Administration favors convoys for lend-lease materials.

"If, however, it turns out to be true, and the pied piper of Pennsylvania Avenue leads the American youth to war in spite of his promises and pledges for peace," he declared, "I know of no language strong enough to denounce such a betrayal of trust."

He said "convoys means shooting and shooting means war," and providing convoys would be "a deliberate attempt to lead us into war."

Baldwin said the United States was committed to a policy "to provide certain democracies in Europe and the Far East with the ways and means, either to vanquish the declared enemies of the American way of life, or to keep them occupied until America itself is sufficiently prepared to stand off their enemies."

Convoys for materials is the only means, he declared, since "no war was ever won, no defense policy can ever be successful, with vital materials lying unused on a dock."

Cowboy Dancers to Take Part in Festival

Colorado Cowboy Dancers Coming to D. C. Folk Festival

The Lloyd Shaw dancers from the Cheyenne Mountain School near Colorado Springs, exponents of the quadrille and old-time square and pioneer dances, and the colorful Swedish dance group from Lower Merion, Pa. directed by Katherine Rambo, will return to Washington to rthe eighth annual Folk Music Festival to be held May 1, 2, and 3.

Formal invitations to participate in this year's program were extended both groups in Constitution Hall at the close of the Festival last year, and their formal acceptances were in the hands yesterday of Miss Sarah Gertrude Knott, national director of the Folk Festival Association.

Acceptances for the festival have already been received from approximately 500 of the Indians, cowboys, mountain harp singers, ballad singers, fiddlers, banjo pickers, dance groups and other folk minstrels who were on the Washington programs last year. In addition several groups new to the city are expected. These will include the Mexican singers and dancers directed by Eleanor Hague, of Pasadena, and possibly native instrumentalists and singers from Mexico and three other Latin-American republics. Final arrangements for the visit of these groups have not been completed, however.

Lumberjacks from Michigan with their Viking fiddles and other home-made instruments and dances and songs of the woods; miners from the anthracite regions of Pennsylvania, with traditional ballads, ballads, come-ye-alls and jig and breakdown steps, and canal boatmen with their wistful ballads, will be on the six programs, and there will be a delegation of Pennnsylvania Dutch singers.

Institute sessions for the many folk lorists, anthropologists and other scholars interested in the folk songs, folk lore and folk ways of America will be held each day of the festival, and letters from many distinguished leaders in this field indicate a record number of papers and discussions.

As in previous year, there also will be exhibits of native crafts and skills and a collection representative of the vernacular art of today. The exhibits will be placed in Constitution Hall.

The objective of the National Folk Festival, which is sponsored by The Washington Post Folk Festival Association, is to bring together annually the varied racial groups from the different sections of the United States, with their characteristic folk expresssions for a people's holiday and merry-making.

Miss Gertrude Knott, Festival director, amplified this yesterday when she said:

"In addition to the joy the Festival gives to participants and audiences, it reflects the social life and traditional customs used since early days. Through the interchange of distinctive folk songs, music, dances, myths and folk stories of the different races will come, we hope, a better understanding and more tolerance which should result in stronger national unity. It hopes to create consciousness of the richness of our traditional folk-art, the basic art, which would undoubtedly help to inspire classic art built on these roots."

Besides Miss Knott officers of the National Folk Festival Association are: President, Paul Green, University of North Carolina; vice presidents, Dr. Homer P. Rainey, president of the University of Texas, and Dr. Vaud A. Travis, Northeastern Teachers College, Oklahoma; executive secretary and business manager, Maj. M. J. Pickering; general counsel, Maurice J. Speiser, Philadelphia.

Roosevelt Heads Back to Capital

likely.

Mr. Roosevelt has made clear that he will not divulge what airplanes, ships, guns and ammunition have been transferred until they are across the seas and Germany and Italy can make no move to halt ttheir shipment.

The President's pledge of "action and more action" was given in his Jackson Day address by radio from Port Everglades, Fla., last night. As soon as the President reaches Washington he expected to devote himself to numerous war problems, including implementation of the $7,000,000,000 lease-lend program.

With two brief military inspections planned en route, the President was headed back to Washington tonight.

Tomorrow the Chief Executive will emphasize the importance of military preparedness by inspecting two Army establishments. In the morning he will spend two hours at Fort Jackson, near Columbia, S. C., where 32,000 men, including the 102d New Jersey National Guard Cavalry, are stationed. Later in the day he plans to visit Fort Bragg, 9 miles from Fayettville, N. C., where 34,000 men, including the 134th New York National Guard Medical Regiment, are on duty.

At Fort Jackson, for the first time Mr. Roosevelt will see one of the Army's "streamlined" triangular divisions, created to meet the new and more mobile methods of warfare employed by Germany in overwhelming France and Poland. The triangular division at Jackson has three infantry regiments and one mixed regiment of artillery and supply troops instead of the four infantry and two artillery regiments of the old "square" division also located there.

Speculation aboard the Presidential special, which left Port Everglades, Fla., at 11 a. m. and tonight was in South Carolina, centered upon what new actions the President would take upon his return to Washington toward checking the ambitions of the dictators for "domination of the world," as Mr. Roosevelt put it in his Jackson Day speech. He is expected to reach the Nation's Capital Tuesday morning.

The President apparently raised the question in his speech of whether the 40-hour week would not have to be abandened in defense industries, where necessary, by saying that "overtime" work is essential and asserting that he himself works 16 hours a day.

There was conjecture also as to whether the Administration was not prepared to "crack down" on Communist activities in labor unions and elsewhere, since Mr. Roosevelt last night recalled the fate of France, indicating its defeat was caused partly by Communist infiltration into organized labor.

Survey Shows Need of Pacific Bases by U. S.

A survey by the Foreign Policy Association of naval and air bases in the Pacific, made public yesterday, asserted that American defense in this area depends upon preventing Japan from acquiring bases with which to attack this Nation.

In the survey, prepared by A. Randle Elliott, it was said that since the United States has no bases in the Far East, any attack by it upon Japan could be successful only if our Navy had the use of British, French and Dutch naval bases.

"In the Eastern Pacific," Elliott declared, "the United States occupies an excellent defensive position, since it would be virtually impossible for an Asiatic enemy, with no bases near America, to maintain supply lines and conduct a major campaign at a distance of over 4,000 miles.

"The United States dominates or controls all of the islands suitable for military bases in this half of the North Pacific, and from these positions American naval forces could set out to engage any attacking foe at the time and place most favorable for an American counter-attack. With no bases on this side of the Pacific, enemy ships would have to conserve their fuel and ammunition; they could, at most, bombard the West Coast only briefly, and probably under constant attack from shore-based bombers and fire from coastal batteries."

On the other hand, he said, "despite the strategic advantages of the United States in the eastern Pacific, this country, before it could win a war with Japan, would have to take the offensive in Asiatic waters, where the element of distance would favor the Japanese. In the western Pacific, American naval communications would be vulnerable to disruption by the Japanese fleet and the comparative lack of United States bases in this area would place further limitations on the offensive strategy employed by American forces."

"Current Army and Navy building projects are fully utilizing the natural strategic advantages of outlying American bases in the Pacific. For the first time the United States is erecting strong military establishments in Alaska, and constructing air and naval stations on the small islands to the west and south of Hawaii. Hawaii itself, as the country's foremost outlying base, is rapidly becoming even more formidable, and patrols stationed at the new island outposts will increase Pearl Harbor's usefulness as a base of operation for the fleet.

Arms Orders Fixers Phony, Nelson Warns

Copyright by New York Times

Donald M. Nelson, director of the division of priorities, Office of Production Management, issued a strongly worded warning yesterday against individuals or organizations who give the impression that employment of certain agents or "contacts" will help anyone get a contract under the defense program.

"Any businessman who wants to sell goods or services to the Army or Navy can make his contacts direct with the Army and Navy purchasing officers," Nelson said. He does not need to join some special organization or take space in a commercial exposition in order to get in touch with these officers or in order to enhance his chance of getting a contract from them.

The businessman is simply foolish if he thinks paying a fee of any sort to any person or organization will make it easier for him to get a defense contract. If any person or organization makes the flat claim that payment of such a fee will expedite the securing of a contract, we would like to know about it. The Department of Justice will be asked to look into all such claims, and will also be asked to investigate any persons who pay the fees."

Offices Set Up

The Government has set up several offices through which a prospective contractor can obtain full information about the steps that are necessary in selling to the armed services, he said.

"The Defense Contract Service, established by the Office of Production Management in cooperation with the Federal Reserve System, was set up for this very purpose," he added. "Regional offices of this service are maintained at all Federal Reserve banks and all Federal Reserve branch banks. . . .

"Both the Army and the Navy will send any businessman, upon request, a booklet telling where their respective procurement offices are situated and describing in complete detail the way to get on bid invitation lists and the way to get consideration for negotiated contracts.

Bureau Opened

"The Department of Commerce has opened a service and information bureau to answer any questions businessmen wish to ask about defense procurement. This bureau will arrange appointments for businessmen and in other ways help them expedite their business."

At the same time the Defense Commission fixed maximum prices at which zinc scrap materials and secondary slab zinc may be sold.

Prices for various classes of scrap material ranged from 4.25 cents a pound, f. o. b. point of shipment, on old die cast scrap to 6.75 cents, delivered at buyer's plant, on new zinc clippings.

The quotations fixed for secondary slab zinc, which is reprocessed metal, ranged from 7.25 to 7.50 cents a pound. They were based on delivery at East St. Louis, Ill.

The price schedule was the third issued by the commission, the others being on second-hand machine tools and on aluminum scrap.

Tungsten Deposit Found in Idaho

Discovery of a high-grade deposit of tungsten ore, a vital defense material, in Valley County, Idaho, jointly by Bureau of Mines engineers and geologists of the Geological Survey was announced yesterday.

No estimate of the reserve tonnage available can yet be made but enough of it has been secured to indicate that the discovery may be one of great importance.

Plane-Making Facilities Rise ¼ in 2 Months

Copyright by New York Times

Col. John H. Jouett, president of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America, announced yesterday that the American aircraft manufacturing industry has increased its productive facilities 28 per cent in the 59 days between January 1 and March 1 of this year.

As spokesman for the industry, Col. Jouett announced that a new survey shows a total of 24,122,230 square feet of productive floor space in operation by plane, engine and propeller companies on March 1, as compared to 18,782,879 square feet on January 1, an increase of 5,339,351 square feet, or 28 per cent.

During the same period, 27,261 additional shop employes were hired, and in a vast majority of cases, placed in training by the companies, he explained. These new hirings brought to 173,076 the total of shop employes in plane, engine and propeller plants on March 1, as compared to 145,815 on January 1, a 19 per cent increase, Col. Jouett said.

According to Col. Jouett, total floor space of the industry as of March 1, including engineering and clerical, combined with productive floor space, was 31,383,967 square feet total personnel, including executive, accounting, engineering and research, as well as shop employes, was 226,172. He pointed out that the chamber survey did not cover aeronautical manufacturing activities of the automobile industry, which is building aircraft engines under license and plane subassemblies under subcontract to aircraft manufacturers.

"The progress made in January and February," continued Col. Jouett, in commenting on the results of the survey, "demonstrates the remarkable ability with which the industry is achieving its goal in this vital phase of the defense program."

In breaking down the totals, Col. Jouett reported that the airplane manufacturing companies alone increased productive floor space from 12,664,600 square feet on January 1 to 16,178,093 square feet on March 1, and shop employes from 104,370 to 123,618. Engine companies from 5,272,479 to 6,440,509 square feet and shop employes from 35,950 to 42,591. Propeller concerns increased productive floor space from 845,800 to 1,503,628 square feet and shop employes from 5,495 to 6,867.

U. S. Men Soft? Say It Softly, Hobo King Told

When Hobo King Jeff Davis proclaimed the week of May 10-17 National Hobo Week he was within his rights, but when he uttered that malarka about American men being softies, he was definitely out of the groove, a Marine asserted.

The Leatherneck corporal of the guard at Washington Navy Yard made the assertion yesterday when questioned about allegations the rulers of Hoboes of America, Inc., included in his proclamation from Pittsburgh, Pa., last week.

Davis, now 59 and gray, but an active hobo after an estimated 1,040,000 miles of travel, charged American husbands are becoming "lollypops and nincompoops," valueless to national defense.

They "should get out and rough it for a while . . . hang the "gone for a week" sign on their offices . . . put on old clothes," he declared.

Some "Subtle" Comments

The hobo leader added a few comments of a more subtle nature: "There are too many suicides. Think of the pioneers who settled this country—they never committed suicide," and "a man should mix more with his friends and relatives. Too many have that Greta Garbo complex 'I want to be alone.'"

The corporal of the guard was called upon for comment on the "lollypop" phase of Davis' proclamation. He said:

"I've served five years in the Marines and I've seen Americans, service men and civilians, here and abroad—in China, Indo-China, the Philippines, the American West Coast and Washington, D. C., and the average is almost as good as the Marines."

Albert J. Zyvoloski, of 39 Wine Avenue, Hyattsville, Md., who happens to have the last name in the local telephone directory and is a married man with five children, had this to say, as a typical American husband:

"No sir, the husbands aren't getting soft. Two of my boys are out camping with the Boy Scouts today and they wanted me to go along. Say, I get enough hiking around the house with them without going camping."

It's the Kids, He Says

Zyvoloski added: "It's the kids who are getting soft. Nowadays, they can't walk a block to the store on an errand—they have to ride their bicycles. When I was a boy I used to walk miles to go to the store, among other chores, and think nothing of it."

Also asked for comment on Davis' theories was Prof. Steuart Henderson Britt, assistant professor of psychology at George Washington University.

Prof. Britt said the hobo king's suicide deductions were fallacious, if for no other reason than that no statistics on the number of suicides among American pioneers are available.

He discounted the Garbo references on the ground that "American culture demands that some men be of the introvert type, and some of the mixer, the talkative, glad-hand species."

The cause of the blast was undetermined, but officials termed it accidental. The men killed were working in the filter house, in which lubricating oil is processed.

Defense Value Of CCC Hailed On 8th Year

By the Associated Press

The Civilian Conservation Corps, born eight years ago today at the depth of the depression, was hailed yesterday as one of the important factors of the national preparedness effort.

Although the 275,000 youths within its ranks have received no training in the art of war, Director J. J. McEntee said they had become specialists in a dozen fields as vital to national defense as firing a gun.

Reviewing the Corps' accomplishments on its anniversary, McEntee asserted in a statement that thousands of men had been taught the mechanics of engines and had become experts in driving heavy tractors and transport trucks. Many have been trained as welders, telephone men, woodworkers, surveyors, field radio operators, photographers and cooks. Others have learned parachute jumping as part of their fire-fighting routine.

Benefits Cited

And, McEntee added, almost 3,000,000 men have learned to live healthfully together in barracks under discipline similar to that of the Army.

In addition to the more than 250,000 men now manning the 1,500 CCC camps, thousands of the Corps' 2,500,000 "alumni" are finding their way into varied phases of the defense program where they can utilize their training.

During the eight years, Congress has appropriated $2,800,000,000 for the Corps.

Two thousand skilled mechanics are being trained in the camps" 44 central repair shops. The youths operate 40,000 pieces of automotive equipment, and 72,000 of them each year learn to operate trucks, tractors, bull-dozers, drag lines and scrapes. The CCC operates 29 bakers and cook schools, 31 schools for junior officers, 10 radio schools. One California camp is training aviation mechanics.

No Limit to Expansion

These schools, McEntee said, could be expanded to any limit needed in the interest of defense.

Many boys are engaged in direct preparedness projects. Two companies of huskies sailed last fall for Alaska, to break ground for an airfield. Altogether 4,600 men have been assigned to Army areas for construction and clearance work.

In his review McEntee said that the CCC has constructed more than 45,000 bridges, 118,492 miles of truck trails, and nearly 6,000,000 erosion check dams. It has strung 84,737 miles of telephone lines, erected 101 radio stations, built 24,969,767 rods of fences, prepared 68 airplane landing fields, planted 2,060,403,000 trees and spent over 6,273,000 man-days fighting forest fires.

The average age of the enrollees is between 18 and 19.

Woodrum Calls FBI Watchdog Of Americanism

Representative Clifton Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, Saturday praised the Federal Bureau of Investigation as a unit trained "in the American way" to keep subversive influences "away from our shores."

Speaking at the graduation exercises of the National Police Academy in the Great Hall of the Department of Justice, the Virginian declared "I am happy in the thought that the President, the Congress and the American people have in the FBI the graduates of the National Police Academy and in all law enforcement a vast force that in time of peace or war . . . is devoted, armed and equipped to meet any foe."

He continued: "I agree with J. Edgar Hoover that the O. G. P. U. should remain in Russia, the Gestapo in Germany and the Orva in Italy . . . You men have been trained to keep them away from our shores. May you never fail."

Catholics Aid War Sufferers

Thousands of Catholic worshipers of the Baltimore and Washington Archdioces yesterday answered the appeals of the Bishop's Relief Committee for funds to aid refuges and needy in war-torn lands. It was Passion Sunday.

Every Catholic diocese and archdiocese in the country is participating in the movement, through which war relief appeals have been centralized under a bishop's committee representing the Catholic hierarchy in the United States.

Pastor Marks Anniversary

1,000 Honor Dr. Pierce, Here 40 Years

Celebration of Dr. Ulysses G. B. Pierce's 40 years as pastor of All Souls' Unitarian Church and 50 years in the Unitarian pulpit yesterday drew 1,000 people to the tall-pillared edifice at Sixteenth and Harvard Streets Northwest.

Among them were 50 worshipers who attended when Dr. Pierce came in 1901 to take charge of the congregation, then occupying a structure at Fourteenth and L Streets Northwest. At that time President Taft was among the members.

Looking down over his flock from the high, floral-banked pulpit, Dr. Pierce reviewed 40 years of Unitarianism.

Fences Also Keep Out

In referring to the gradual elimination of barriers caused by creeds, he said: "A person who puts a fence about himself fences out more than he fences in."

He also gave a new interpretation of the phrase, "communion of saints." This includes, he said, the millions of people in fields, mines and other walks of life who have no elaborate theories about religion, but who, through carrying out the will of God, touch the deep springs of religion.

The clergyman greeted 40 new members and christened two babies. The latter were Sandra Lee Armiger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Armiger, who was born on Christmas, and Geoffrey Tate Keating, 6-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Keating, of 2033 North Cleveland Street, Arlington, Va. Miss Eleanor Hilton, sister of Mrs. Armiger, stood as godmother for Sandra.

Receive Congratulations

Before and after the service Dr. and Mrs. Pierce, who this summer will mark their golden wedding anniversary, were kept busy with handshakes and congratulations. Mrs. Pierce wore a corsage of camelias presented by Dr. and Mrs. John Logan.

Jesse Suter, who was assistant superintendent of the church school when Dr. Pierce arrived in Washington, led a Sunday school testimonial to the pastor. He advised the scholars of their opportunities as well as responsibilities in Christian work. Referring to the character-building and habit-forming influence of church schools, he said that regular attendance was never more essential than today.

Dr. Frederick May Eliot, president of the Unitarian Association, and other leaders will speak at a reception for Dr. and Mrs. Pierce at 8 p. m. today in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard Streets Northwest.

Dr. Dunham, Ill, Resigns D. C. Pulpit

After 31 year's service, Dr. J. Harvey Dunham yesterday tendered his resignation as pastor of Western Presbyterian Church, because of illness. He asked that it be made effective tomorrow.

Announcement was made by Elder George Ralston at the close of yesterday's service. He explained that Dr. Dunham, seriously ill for six months, had asked him to inform the congregation of his decision.

Elder Ralston said that the congregation would take action on the resignation next Sunday. The Rev. Irving Ketchum was in charge of yesterday's services.

It was about a year ago that religious leaders of Washington and vicinity gathered to honor Dr. Dunham on the completion of 30 years in the local ministry. Dr. Dunham was fomerly moderator of the Baltimore and Washington Presbyteries. He lives at 4924 Tilden Street Northwest. The church is at 1906 H Street Northwest.

Famed Cellist Shuns Talking About Russia

Miss Raya Garbousova, a Russian who is considered the world's leading woman cellist, is expansive about music but reticent about international politics.

Comely Miss Garbousova, who will appear as a soloist tonight with the National Symphony Orchestra at Constitution Hall, shook her head vigorously when questioned about the Russia she left in 1934 but where her family still lives.

"I never talk politics," she explained.

When the subject was changed to music, she lost her reticence.

Miss Garbousova said she started studying piano at the age of 4 and cello at 7. Her father, a professor at the musical conservatory at Tiflis, in the Russian state of Georgia, launched her in her career with a specially built small cello and a correspondingly small chair.

At the age of 14 she had developed into the most promising young musician in Georgia and was sent to Moscow on a concert tour. In 1934, at 24, she came to this country to make her debut in New York, from which time steadily increasing popularity has followed.

She has no favorite symphony, she says—Brahms, Beethoven, Schubert, they're all my favorites."

Then she remarked happily on the fact that she has taken out her first papers toward American citizenship.

"It is thrilling" said Miss Garbousova." "Of course, I have five more years before I become a citizen. But really I am an American now. I mean psychologically. I'm in American life."

Guilty Attorney Not From Rockville

In a story published in The Post March 27, it was stated: "Leo Weinberg, Frederick attorney and former Republican candidate for attorney general, paid a $150 fine in circuit court yesterday on a contempt charge."

This statement was correct, but the headline was incorrect, reading: "Rockville Attorney Fined in Contempt." Weinberg is not a Rockville attorney, nor is he a member of the bar of Montgomery County, of which Rockville is the county seat. Weinberg was fined at Rockville because that was where the offense of which he was found guilty was committed.

Church Plans Memorial to G. W. Founder

First announcement of a proposed Luther Rice Memorial Foundation, honoring the founder of George Washington University, who was a Baptist, was made here yesterday by the Rev. Mike Elliott, pastor of Luther Rice Memorial Baptist Church.

The Rev. Mr. Elliott said at the morning service of his church that preliminary steps for the project have been taken, and that it will involve expenditure of $200,000 over a period of years.

The memorial, he stated, would take the form of a church plant on the site of the Luther Rice Church at 5315 North Capitol Street.

A congregational committee already formed at Luther Rice Church hopes to encourage city and Nation-wide Baptist interest in the memorial, Mr. Elliott reported.

Born in Northboro, Mass., in 1783, Mr. Rice founded Columbian College—forerunner of George Washington University—in 1823. He established the Columbian Star, first Baptist publication in America. He died in 1836, and is buried in South Carolina.

Lawyers Told Labor Is Made 'Scapegoat'

Joseph Kovner, assistant general counsel of the C. I. O., told 100 Washington lawyers yesterday that Government and business leaders are seeking to cloak their own inefficiency by blaming defense production lags on labor.

Kovner said he was presenting the official viewpoint of the C. I. O. He spoke in place of Allan S. Haywood, C. I. O. director of organization, at a conference on democracy and defense sponsored by the District chapter of the National Lawyers Guild at the Burlington Hotel. Haywood was unable to attend the meeting.

Mistakes to Be Revealed

"The mistakes and failures of the defense program, the lack of adequate planning and coordination, the shortage of vital supplies and the delays in expanding production will soon emerge into the light of day," Kovner said.

"When this happens, the ground will have already been prepared to shift attention from those responsible. Labor will be made the scapegoat."

The right to strike and other civil liberties can only flourish in a society "that can afford them," Kovner said. He added:

"There is a fundamental unbalance and injustice in our economy in the distribution of wages and profits. The correction of this unbalance is possible only when workers have the right to improve their wage status by halting production through the strike.

"This may be costly. But if we wish to defend democracy in a democratic way, we cannot sacrifice these rights. And we can afford the cost easily if we organize our economy to meet the needs of our times in production."

Asks Inventory

He recommended an inventory of defense needs and productive capacity and the organization of central planning bodies to replace the "chaotic grouping of defense agencies" and coordinate the industry of the country.

Osmond K. Fraenkel, director of the American Civil Liberties Union, warned that "the strike is a safety valve that enables individuals who are deeply dissatisfied to have their fling. Suppression of strikes would bring about widespread dissatisfaction that, in the long run, would hinder defense far more than the strikes themselves."

Fraenkel told the lawyers that, as in the World War, civil liberties are threatened by "heightened tension and hysterical fear." Pointing to the refusal of the ballot to minority parties in many States, he urged "every effort to increase tolerance." He added, "The right of people to express views must be protected, no matter what those views are."

Similar views were expressed by A. J. Isserman, counsel of the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties. Isserman discussed a number of recent attacks upon civil liberties in various parts of the country.

Montgomery Groups Oppose Jai Alai Bill

Montgomery County Civic Federation leaders last night opposed the measure to legalize pari-mutuel betting on jai alai in Montgomery County. A telegram urging State Senator Robert Peter to bend every effort to kill the bill was sent last night by federation heads.

A bill was introduced Saturday in the Maryland House of Delegates which would permit legalized pari-mutuel betting on jai alai games in Montgomery County. The bill was passed by the House under suspension of rules and forwarded to the Senate for final action.

Maj. E. Brooke Lee, who with Delegates James W. Gill, Stanton C. Peelle, jr., and Ruth Shoemaker, sponsored the bill, said that the opportunity had come within the last 48 hours and that the delegation felt it best to have the establishment authorized and then discover the sentiment of the people in the county.

The proposal would be left on the desk of Gov. O'Conor until the county delegation ascertained public sentiment in the county, Lee said. If sentiment opposed the action, the Governor would be asked to veto the bill.

$250,000 Building

The proposed jai alai bill would provide that the building must cost at least $250,000 and that the employes must come at least 85 per cent from Maryland and at least 60 per cent from Montgomery County. The court would be operated under supervision of the Maryland racing commission and 1 per cent of the pari-mutuel bets would go to the State and 2 per cent to the county. In addition the county would receive 10 cents for each admission ticket under 65 cents and 20 per cent on admission tickets at a higher rate.

The jai alai court would be located on a tract of at least five acres probably in the Silver Spring area as near as possible to the District line.

Delegate James W. Gill, chairman of the county delegation, said the county members are not committed to the plan by any means but are keeping their minds open until the subject is thoroughly explored. He said that the court would be expected to attract a high type of patron, drawn largely from the diplomatic and legation staffs of Washington.

Big Profits

Maj. Lee said the county probably would profit about $250,000 a year from the venture, with a possibility of even higher profits and that the State probably would receive $100,000. The county share would mean that all bonded indebtedness coming due could be paid without use of tax funds making possible reduction in the tax rate of at least 25 cents, and possibly more. A license fee of $50,000 and posting of a $50,000 bond guaranteeing that the provisions of the act would be carried out also are included in the authorization pact.

O. M. Kile, president of the Montgomery County Civic Federation, last night sent the following telegram to Senator Peter:

"Urge you to kill the bill authorizing jai alai with gambling in Montgomery County. Those in Civic Federation I have contacted are vigorously opposed and resent the idea of bringing up a matter of this kind in the closong days of the session of the Legislature without any opportunity for consideration by county residents. Many cite this as best possible argument for change to home rule government as advocated by Brookings Institution report. Trust you will see to it that bill is killed."

Kile said last night, "Not only is the gambling an objectionable feature, but if the proposed structure is anything like the jai alai court in the northern outskirts of Miami, it will be an eyesore to the community and would entail acute traffic congestion in whatever area it is located.

WONDERFUL JOHN TIO, the big parrot who imitates movie stars, will head the Lotus' new "Blossom Revue" starting today. John is certainly the most marvelous and accomplished of living birds. He was featured at the World's Fair for two seasons after eight years of intensive training by Francis Abella. At that, his takeoffs of cinema biggies are almost incredible, coming from a bird. He learned his inflections by listening to the radio, but Mr. Abella has also taken John to the movies to both see and hear his models. Yes, sir! John is the Barrymore of birds. And he has a great profile, too . . . Also at Lotus you'll find the Sullys, "Two Gobs of Joy," and the Eight Dancing Buds.

Newest innovation in the Lounge Riviera is the background of organ rhythm by Ida Clarke that gives richness to rumbas, tangos and waltzes. This puts Ida right in as a member of Pete Macias' band, makes her the only leddy dance musician around town.

DROP-A-NICKEL MOVIES. Don Carper and his Cafe Caprice Four will be the first musical group in Washington to appear in Jimmy Roosevelt's new nickel-in-the-slot movies. They'll make a flying trip to New York tomorrow to make about 10 of the glorified "juke-box jumpies." Their numbers will be strictly Hawaiian, with tropical backgrounds and gorgeous hula dancers shivering in the foregrounds.

PAQUITA, dancer from Mexico, who opens at LaSalle Versailles tonight

REMEMBER EDDY BLUM, the wispy little fellow who doubled as stooge and accompanist for Alan Gale when he was at Paul Young's? Now that Allan and Eddy are at the Capitol Theater, busy Mr. Blum is doing another kind of doubling by skipping up to Paul Young's for the midnight show and tearing off several yards of smart marimba playing.

"PAGING MISS JONES," serial skit of the miniature "Helzapoppin'" to be staged in the Metronome Room this week by Jack Coffey's crew, will have Warren, Wardman's prize busboy, as its unfeatured star. Warren will page a mythical Miss Jones all around the place. We have a dishonorable hope that there will be five or six real Miss Jones around the place. That will give the affair an impromptu, helzapoppin' touch. . . . Other nifties in the Coffey extravaganza include "Rockabye Baby" by the Three Smart Girls and a spot of inspired inebriacy by "Tipsy" Walters.

The "Gentlemen of Rhythm," led by Joe Browne, will sound off in Mayfair on Monday, April 7, after Paul Kain closes on the preceding Saturday to get ready for his Glen Echo opening. The "Gentlemen of Rhythm" will erect their harmonies around the vibraphone, accordion, bass and guitar.

A FLAMING CONGA, literally, will be danced by Vera Fern in the new Shoreham revue opening today. Vera will dance the song in the midst of flames. Let's hope she doesn't roast, but just sizzles. La Fern was the star dancer of "Too Many Girls," which she entered after turning down an offer to appear as Daisy Mae in "L'l Abner." She's sorry now. The Shoreham's Max Lowe says that Vera is "possibly the best dancer ever to appear in the Blue Room." And that, from Max, is the ultimate in kind words.

THE "LITTLE SIX" REVUE will open today at the Casino Royal. The "Little Six" are Muriel Kretlow dancers and are all expected to be of pony type—tiny, dashing and cutey-cutey. A group of vaudeville acts will be headed by the Belmont Brothers. Songs by Bob Preble, super-clowning by Jack Schafer.

AMBULANT CAMERA. Cosmos Room. The sight-of-the-week! Meaning Gene Autry in an orchid shirt and baby blue satin suit braided in white. Yip-pee-e! . . . Mayflower Lounge. Jack Egan, who bangs publicity tomtoms for Tommy Dorsey, Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. Stettinius being shown to the verra best table available. Mrs. Lily Santmyer, owner of La Salle Versailles, looking mah-velous in a tall red hat with sassy black feathers . . . Ciro's Famous Village. Band Leader Bob Knight, who was with Horace Heidt before he branched out so successfully on his own. Also at the table were Mrs. Knight and New Dealer Frank Watson Luther . . . Anchor Room. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Reed chatting with Matt Windsor. Mrs. Reed, formerly a professional singer, later delighted everybody with a couple of charming solos.

A THOUSAND BUSTLES! Ethel Fistere, of the Arthur Murray Dancers, makes those comic bustles that the lassies wear when dancing the boompsa-daisy in the Pall Mall Room. The boompsa isn't exactly easy on bustles and Mrs. Fistere finished her 1,000th last week.

EXITS AND ENTRANCES. Jim Fitzpatrick will shortly leave the Rainbow Room orchestra to join Paul Kain's Glen Echo band. In the meantime, the Rainbow Room is quivering with rumors of hotsy-totsy novelties and projects to be unwrapped in the next few weeks. . . . Vicente de la Garza will leave the King Cole Room in about a month to become the Pan-American minstrel on a McCormick Line cruise to South America . . . 'Member Tackline of the Pirates' Den? He's rolling around town in a snappy sports car, expects to go to work for Uncle Sam.

New murals are being added to the Silver Fox by Artist Richard McNeil. They're as flippant and amusing as his first "Faunette" that always pops the eyeballs of newcomers at the S. F.

EAR TICKLERS. The intricate and exciting piano trickery of Bob and Bertie Hellman in the Neptune Room. Especially when they go berserk with "Fledermaus" . . . The Troika's Patricia Prochnik makes any song completely bewitching. You'll love the pretty comedy she adds to "Accidentally On Purpose" . . . "Clavelitos," a wickedly slow rumba, is being played with finesse by Madrillon's Trio Lirico . . . Maybe you think you don't care for "Mandalay." But you'll change your mind when you hear it bassoed resoundingly by Hardy Frank, of the Hi Hat's Four M's . . . For hearty fun, bend an ear to Lee Everett and Tommy Suter doing "Three Little Pigs" at Restaurant "823." Dignity means nothing to Lee and Tommy. They whistle, grunt and squeal like prize porkers stuck under a fence.

Flash! An April Fool's party is to be tossed in the Wardman Metronome Room tomorrow night. Souvenirs, what-nots and everything. It was decided on at the last second. No foolin'.

Attorneys today expressed doubt that under these circumstances the bequest could be collected.

Church Federation Launches $25,000 Budget Campaign

Cooperative work of the Washington Federation of Churches was praised from many pulpits yesterday, as Federation Sunday launched a $25,000 budget drive by the organization.

The week-long campaign will begin with a workers' dinner at 6:30 p. m. today at First Congregational Church, Tenth and G Streets Northwest. Other report dinners will be held there on Thursday and Monday.

Walter W. Britt, campaign chairman, said he was well pleased with the cooperation of clergy and laymen, and that he felt "very optimistic" over the drive's outcome.

He pointed out that part of this year's budget would be used to help promote religious, social and recreational programs for Selective Service men; to employ a specialist in religion and health as hospital worker, and a full-time worker in religious education.

Schools And Libraries

When the District Commissioners listed postponement of the new central library as one way to get funds for direly needed school construction, they caused some dismay among persons interested in the advancement of education. Such a transfer would be like taking off a sleeve to make a trouser leg. It should be said, however, that the Commissioners did not favor the step—they merely stated that the District had no suitable way to get funds.

As for the library, it is urgently needed, and has been for years. Dr. George F. Bowerman fought for it during the last ten years he was librarian, and only this year his efforts were crowned with success through an item in the 1942 budget. The site has been cleared and plans are well along, but the District now must hold up building until Congress assures an appropriation. In the meantime, the old library is so crowded that office personnel is housed in vestibules and on stairways.

There can be no doubt, however, that the added school funds are essential. The Commissioners lopped $5,000,000 from the school budget for 1942, but the tremendous influx of Government workers has forced them to ask $1,197,710 of it back. The money will have to come from somewhere, but not from the library fund. It is up to Congress to recognize its obligation and find the cash in some other way. When the House District Committee meets today to consider the Overton plan, which would bring the District an extra donation of over $3,000,000 on the theory that the Government should contribute in proportion to the land it takes up, the members can at least make a fair beginning.

Lesson In Finance

In a recent radio address Representative Wright Patman outlined a plan for the costless financing of defense. He contended that it is illogical and entirely unnecessary for the Government to pay interest on borrowed money when it could so easily deliver noninterest bearing bonds to the 12 Federal Reserve Banks at need, obtain credit on their books for these bonds, and draw checks against the deposits thus created. As outstanding interest-bearing bonds became due, they could be paid for in the same way. In Mr. Patman's opinion, the chief obstacle to eliminating interest payments on the Federal debt is the fact that the Federal Reserve Banks are owned by the private banks of the country and operated to further their selfish interests. Vest ownership of the Reserve Banks in the Government, he urges, and it will neither need the money created by private banks nor the savings of the people to finance our defense program.

The questions must have occurred immediately to Mr. Patman's listeners: If the financing of defense needs could be made so painless, why don't we dispense with taxes also? And why did we not discover long ago that the payment of interest on the public debt is unjustified tribute exacted by bankers from a long suffering people? It would be easy to dismiss the Patman claims by asking such questions. But, fearing that the public might be misled by Mr. Patman's specious reasoning, Chairman Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board wisely decided to meet the Texas Congressman on his own ground and publish a detailed reply. Mr. Eccles produced evidence showing that the private banks of the country, far from levying exorbitant toll on the people, have not earned even reasonable average profits during the past decade. He also disposed decisively of charges that the Federal Reserve Banks are operated in the interest of private member banks. Although the member banks own the stock of the Federal Reserve Banks, that stock cannot be sold or transferred, and stock dividends are limited to six per cent by statute. That small payment could, as Mr. Eccles says, be done away with altogether "without important effects except to put an end to the illusion created by you and others in the minds of the people."

The inflationary menace of the Patman plan is discussed at length in the Eccles reply. The plan would entail pumping into the banking system large amounts of new money, or rather purchasing power in the form of both currency and deposits. This new money would be added to the volume of idle funds already held by the banks and "increase many fold" the excess reserves of member banks. The net result of such dangerous financial methods, which would cause a general decline in interest rates and simultaneously increase the amount of money seeking investment, are well summed up by Mr. Eccles in the concluding paragraph of his reply: "In such circumstances," he says, "funds intended for investment would either remain uninvested or would, out of necessity, be used for the speculative purchase of existing consumption goods, physical property, and equities of various kinds. Such conditions would completely demoralize our economic system as now constituted. It would mean the end of capitalism and require the substitution of some other system in its place."

Naval Epic

Since the naval battle that took place last summer in which the Australian cruiser, Sydney, sent to the bottom the fast and powerful Italian cruiser, Bartolomeo Colleoni, the Italian fleet has carefully avoided a head-on encounter with British sea power. Mussolini apparently operated on the theory that "he who fights and runs away will live to fight another day." By keeping his fleet in being, he has forced the British to maintain a considerable portion of their naval strength in the Mediterranean, and to that extent he has been entitled to some measure of gratitude from his German Fuehrer. The unheroic conduct of the Italian fleet has not, however, saved it from harm. Thus, on November 11, torpedo-carrying British aircraft carried out a raid on the Italian naval base at Taranto in which three Italian battleships were crippled. Since then three other Italian battleships are said to have been damaged, though they had to be ferreted out of their hiding places by British men o' war engaged in sweeping the Middle Sea.

Now at last the British have got the Italian fleet to come out and give battle. Last week British reconnaissance planes flying over the eastern Mediterranean came upon an Italian battle squadron consisting of battleships, cruisers and destroyers. Notified of this concentration, Admiral Sir Andrew Cunningham ordered his fleet to give chase. The result was a naval battle which is said to have been the greatest of the present war. According to an admiralty communique, it has already resulted in the sinking of three Italian cruisers and two destroyers. The British fleet, adds the communique, suffered no loss or damage, though two planes which took part in the fight did not return. Thus the badly shrunk Italian naval force is now even less of a match for British sea power than it proved to be at the outset. And more than ever Britain is mistress of the Mediterranean, a fact of very considerable importance at a time when control of that sea means that she will be able to rush reinforcements to those peoples in the Balkans who are now prepared to resist Hitler.

Into The Night?

The case of Mr. Jan Valtin, enormously successful author, alias Julius H. Krebs, sometime of San Quentin Penitentiary, presents another interesting dilemma. Mr. Valtin surrendered himself Friday to the immigration authorities at Ellis Island, and was released in $5,000 bond. There seems no doubt that Mr. Valtin entered this country illegally, and is thus fully deportable under the law. If he is to be deported again, the problem of how to get him back to Germany is a poser in itself. But, even if it can be solved, his attorney contends that Mr. Valtin is now the sworn foe of Naziism and all its works, and thus that deportation would be tantamount to a sentence of death. We know what that means. If the revelations in Mr. Valtin's book about Gestapo methods are only half true, the death would be a painful and lingering one.

However, the New York Daily Worker would evidently like us believe that Mr. Valtin is still working for the Gestapo. This might seem less plausible if Mr. Valtin had never written a book, but, as it is, you never can tell. According to the testimony in "Out of the Night," Mr. Valtin began his career as a Communist in post-war Germany, and as such served his party in various parts of the world, including California, where he fell foul of the law, was imprisoned, and after serving his term, deported. After the accession to power of the Nazis, he got into the hands of the Gestapo, and was tortured in their prisons until he professed conversion to their doctrines. After that the Nazis took him into the Gestapo, where he worked as an undercover agent among the Bolsheviks, but nevertheless lapsed somehow into the clutches of the O. G. P. U. In other words, Mr. Valtin was a secret agent, spying upon other secret agents, and spied upon in turn by still other secret agents. Now, it is rumored, he is working in collaboration with the FBI.

If all this is true, the political allegiances of Mr. Valtin have been so devious and labyrinthine that one may be pardoned for wondering where they really belong. Perhaps by this time Mr. Valtin does not know himself. Nothing is better illustrative of the utterly fantastic kind of world created by these modern police states than Mr. Valtin's own story.

Out On A Limb

The United Automobile Workers who voted on Saturday to continue their strike at the Allis-Chalmers Milwaukee plant have decided on a reckless course. In effect they are now striking against the Government. The union declares that its men will not return to work, despite the appeals to their patriotism by Secretary Knox and OPM Director Knudsen, until they obtain the security which "the United States Government has promised us." So it is clearly the OPM and the Navy which the union is now defying.

It is precisely this sort of unwillingness on the part of a few unions to listen to reason which is arousing public demands that the right to strike be curbed. The C. I. O. strikers at Milwaukee have taken an arbitrary stand which they cannot possibly maintain. They called a strike in a plant turning out vital defense equipment by the use of 2,200 fraudulent ballots. Despite the order of the Wisconsin Employment Relations Board that a new vote be conducted, the union met in closed session and ordered the strike to go on. Whatever public support the union had when it walked out more than three months ago is now dissipated by these irresponsible tactics.

Officials in Washington have asked the men only to go back to work, and they have given an assurance that they will assist in a reasonable settlement after work is resumed. The union attempts to twist this request into a "conspiracy." If by any stretch of the imagination it can be so regarded, the "conspiracy" is aimed solely at preventing further sabotage of the defense program and the charge properly belongs to the union. For it has taken upon itself full responsibility for the continued delay in turning out machinery for fighting ships and powder factories. Its attitude is equivalent to an invitation to Washington to "crack down" on irresponsible labor groups. It looks as if it has rendered the cause of labor a profound disservice which makes the immediate losses to the workers, heavy as they are, seem small by comparison.

Time And A Half

The significance of the President's reference in his Jackson Day speech to the emergency necessity of working overtime has given rise to considerable speculation. Did Mr. Roosevelt mean to imply that the 40-hour week in defense industries should be abrogated for the duration of the emergency? Or was he merely stressing the obvious importance of securing the fullest possible utilization of man power and equipment? The latter surmise seems more plausible. For there are no inflexible limits imposed by law upon the length of the working day or week in defense industries. Indeed, working hours in key defense industries have already been considerably lengthened as a result of extensive overtime operations. For example, the Department of Labor reports that hours of work in the machine tool industry averaged 50.4 in January; machine tool accessories came in a close second; while concerns manufacturing firearms, engines, turbines and other strategic equipment averaged well over 40 hours weekly.

Thus the Federal wage-hour law and the Walsh-Healey Act applicable to Government contracts do not prevent a man from working any number of hours. But these laws do hit the employer by compelling him to pay for all overtime at time and a half rates. Union contracts in some cases, moreover, call for double rates of pay for overtime. The official record as well as unofficial evidence indicates that many employers have found it desirable to obtain a greater output by paying overtime rates. But there are undoubtedly many other employers who have been deterred from lengthening working hours by the extra expense. Legislation of this type, therefore, acts indirectly as a brake upon productive activity, and adds to the cost of defense preparations. However, there will be time enough to worry about this effect of wage policies when the country has rolled up its sleeves and kept on the job in normal work hours. The President's reminder that we have additional need for the product of overtime points up the nature and urgency of our national task.

THE MOWED FIELD

Late in the afternoon, a little square
Of clover stands in the field and all the rest
Is drying in the swaths beneath the glare
Of sun . . .
A red fox trembles with his breast
Pushed hard against the shadowy cool ground
In that last stand of clover. On her nest
A ground bird still is motionless. The sound
The mower makes comes nearer, hissing through
The tall sweet grass . . .
What can I say to you,
Red fox, with such a place to rest and hide
Cut down about you now? Be up! Be gone!
A sly red shadow through the countryside!
And what to you, brown bird? The blade comes on
But, with your wings to fly, you must abide
To warm the fledgelings . . . if the nest is spared . . .
Though all the field to all the sky is bared.

Willkie At Toronto

I do not claim to be anything more than a common judge of what the world regards as a wonderful piece of literature, but I would like to make a prediction that it will so regard the speech made by Wendell L. Willkie in Toronto yesterday. Great emergencies and crises bring to the front great statesmen. That speech has suddenly elevated one who has been regarded as a somewhat ordinary politician to the highest rank of statesmanship. It is probably the best production to fit the time and place made in many a long day if ever. It will bring to a new light and prominence a man already high in the people's favor and esteem and prove that such popularity has been based upon merit far higher and nobler than ordinary politics. It has made him a peerless world figure.

Laws Of Liberty

Not until man's greatest pleasure becomes that of instilling a greater store of spiritual beauty within his rebellious nature to make it subservient to the sacred laws of liberty and freedom, and to a longing for wisdom and understanding, as a blind man longing for light, can he expect a government to survive that governs him least.

German People's Talent For Freedom

The address of Dr. Ludwig Hamburger before the university women, so well reported in The Post by Miss Jessie Arndt, tempts me to some observations upon the important question of the German character.

When it comes to determining what to do with Germany in the hoped-for event of Hitler's defeat it will be well not to let ourselves be deceived as to the possibilities inherent in a German nation that may some day make her a welcome member of a society of liberal nations.

Dr. Hamburger is quoted as saying that the Nazis like strict rule and that the Germans prefer order to freedom. First we must differentiate between the German people in their historic character and the Nazi rule. Then we must point out that order and freedom are not in themselves antagonistic.

We have been told again and again that the German people did not care for a republic, that they failed because of inherent inability to rule themselves. Such statements ignore the fact that for hundreds of years there have been large cities and wide centers in Germany where pure democracy flourished until Hitler came. They ignore the fact that the first real religious freedom in Europe existed in a section of Germany.

How does one explain the fact that Germans come to this country and in a few years after arrival are among the leaders of a wide range of civic activities? How account for the fact that largest German population (with one possible exception), concentrated in the City of Milwaukee, develops one of the best governed cities in one of the most progressive States of the Union?

Whether it be an officer of the Allis-Chalmers Co., a strong Republican conservative capitalist, or the many times "Socialist" Mayor of Milwaukee, the great mass of German-Americans in Milwaukee are orderly, God-fearing but nonetheless liberal, freedom-loving democrats. They know how to keep order and they know how to govern themselves.

Space will not permit the story of the failure of the German Republic. It had little to do with the inherent character of the German people. Nor to attempt to discuss the causes of Hitlerism. Enough for the moment that Hitler did come. By trick, by deceit by all the arts of demagoguery, by ruthlessness unparalleled in modern history, Hitler did gain control of the German government, of the schools and of the other sources of education, and, finally, of much of the church itself.

There has occured a distortion of character of the German youth through the false teaching that might makes right, that the Germans are a superior race and that anything is justified by the success of German armed might, which has brought on the great tragedy of our age. Whether Hitler wins temporary success or not, these misled youths will suffer a lifetime of disappointment, of regret, of shame, worse than any physical suffering now heaped so ruthlessly upon their poor victims. It will be difficult for these of this generation ever to see and understand the truth. The problem will be a most difficult one for them.

But there remain today many, many Germans who still greet each other with "Gott Gruess" rather than "Heil Hitler." And there are many Germans in this country and in England who were in all Europe the first refugees from Hitlerism.

Just as are the rulers of Holland and of Norway ready to go back to put their people where they rightly belong, so are these German refugees waiting to go back to help those of the Germans who will be ready to put their country back on the path of orderly freedom.

Whether Germany be split up into smaller units for fear she will again try the disastrous experiment of running wild in Europe, or whether she be permitted to remain a large unit among a safely set up confederation of nations, the sooner we accept the fact that there is little basic difference among the common people of Europe the more surely will we assist in a wise settlement that will safely last. It was Lord Grey who said, "We and the Germans are most alike among Europeans."

Peace will come in time. The world's marvelous technical capacity will some day be harnessed to produce what, under a better system of distribution will bring freedom from want, from fear and from the temptation to fight for the other man's goods.

The false rulers will no longer be able to mislead their people. And the Italian people, under a new generation of Garibaldis, Mazzinis and Cavours, will live side by side with their French, German and English neighbors in peace and contentment, competing in the effort to make better nations of free and orderly citizens.

And the German people will again be in the forefront among the leaders in science, in art, in religious freedom and in political progress.

But, lest I be misunderstood, let me add, that first these Germans will—all of them—good and bad alike—go through a humiliation, an abasement, a sense of degradation that the world has never before seen. Nothing can now prevent that. It is the terrible price that they will inevitably pay for Hitlerism and for all its inhuman horrors, first heaped upon the liberals in Germany itself.

Favors "Stand-Up" Bars

A letter signed by Mr. Costas Alexiou, of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' Alliance, Local 781, notes that the proposed legislation to permit standing bars has now the approval of the District Commission. Mr. Alexiou says that the waiters and waitresses of the city have not been given an opportunity to express their opinions in the matter of "stand-up" bars.

I know that every group and/or individual in the Nation's Capital who had any interest in any changes in the liquor laws of the District of Columbia had an opportunity to voice its opinion and the District Commissioners did not have to go to these groups or individuals to get them.

I further question the statement that the waiters and waitresses have an expert opinion on the "stand-up" bar question. Waiters and waitresses only serve liquor and beer at tables and booths, and of course are not qualified to say how a bar should be run.

Mr. Alexiou says that "stand-up" bars will increase the rolls of unemployment. Now anyone knows that only a limited number of patrons can stand at any bar and they are usually men. Even Mr. Alexiou's international union has indorsed the proposed "stand-up" bar law and I am sure it is qualified to know whether such a law would add to the unemployment rolls.

As for the evils of the old corner saloon, I trust that Mr. Alexiou is not inferring that the present law does not have evils that can be wiped out by "stand-up" bars.

To Stop Strikes

In this country a birth certificate is a receipt for our initiation fee in the world's work. Some of our population have set themselves apart, called themselves Labor, and are proceeding upon the theory that they are the sole proprietors of work. This basic misconception of rights is the reason labor is now responsible for the un-American attitude of worker groups who are blocking our progress in national defense with unnecessary strikes, racketeering fees and closed shops.

During the past few years labor has gained many concessions beyond even their own dreams of conquest and now are taking unfair advantage of the present emergency to create for themselves a class supremacy.

Editors, columnists, writers for months have inveighed against strike evils; Congress, public speakers and finally the President of the United States have warned against delays in production; and now the Nation-wide Gallup Poll shows most of the American people believe labor has gone far enough and strikes should end for the duration of the war. A National Mediation Board has been set up by the President but the labor leaders who engineer strikes know such a board lacks authority.

The pleading with labor has all been in vain. It certainly appears now to be time for militant Government action in Washington, that further delays are now the responsibility of the executive and legislative representatives of all the people.

The Post Impressionist

A "Filler-Outer"

I am a professional man. My profession is filling out application blanks.

The vocation is not a highly paid one. Perhaps it should be; it requires skill and finesse to put the best face on your history and still answer each question "fully and truly, so help you God."

At $20 a day, my fee for writing tabular autobiographies would be $10 per Government department, with a special (wholesale) price to Civil Service of $30. I could then go into the business permanently. Indeed, that part of the record dealing with my past connections would be merchantable as a concise directory of American corporations.

But there is no provision in The Budget for application filler-outers. If there were such a job, I'd apply for it.

From a scrutiny of my first Civil Service application blank, I became convinced that Federal employes must be an exceedingly circumspect and inoffensive lot. There follow a few random queries, with such answers as I could muster:

Date . . . Yes.
Place . . . Up to you.
Sex . . . Maybe.
Do you use intoxicating liquors, . . . (Yes; Gunn had been both shot and half-shot.)
How often? . . . Whenever I have the price.
Have you ever spoken disrespectfully of a United States Senator? . . . Well, . . .
Do you attend Sunday School regularly? . . . I do around Christmas.
Are you a member of the bar? . . . Patron only.

There were special questions for secretarial applicants, e. g.: Do you neck? Where do you park your gum? Do you croon while taking dictation?

My habitual brushes with the police were all exhumed for the delectation of this relentless inquisitor: Have you ever been reprimanded or scowled at by a policeman? If so, give the hour, place, and name of policeman. State your age at the time; also age of policeman. Etc. Etc.

My response to this probe into the seamy side of my life was as follows: CRIMINAL AND LITIGIOUS RECORD OF RODERICK R. (alias "Ramrod") GUNN (Jail-Breaks, Arsons, and Piracies Omitted): 1.—New York. Dropped peanut shells on sidewalk while eating lunch. Fine, 50 cents. 2.—Washington, Violated pedestrian ordinance at 50th and Q Streets N. E. Surrendered myself to headquarters. Sentence suspended. (The judge stuttered.) 3.—Washington. Parked overtime on Kansas Avenue N. W. My Congressman was out of town so had to pay this one.

My private affairs, of course, were pried into with avidity:

Marital status (indicate by check): Single . . . Husband (Legal . . . Assistant . . . Unofficial . . .) Bigamist . . . Trigonometrist . . . Widower (Tombstone . . . Grass . . .)

I replied that so far all my wives had survived the experience.

I found more than casual interest taken in my previous occupations. In differences between an employe and an employer, the employe is invariably in the wrong. This principle is recognized by all employers. Accordingly, one blank asked for references, "preferably employers." Fortunately, I knew of five past employers who were dead and could not—for the present, at least, do me any harm. The next blank asked for references, "preferably not employers." This stumped me. It seemed that I had worked for everybody in the United States. Finally I gave the names of five creditors, whose sole chance of collecting was my landing a job.

One suspicious circumstance in my applications was that so many of my former employers had gone into bankruptcy—struggling, no doubt, to pay my enormous salary. It appeared that I cast a malign shadow over the enterprise which doomed it to eventual destruction. It took real temerity to hire me.

The question, "Have you ever been discharged or asked to resign?" presented no problem. Gunn had not only been discharged; he had actually been fired. My first week on a job, I am fired by enthusiasm. The second week I am fired by the boss.

The typical application blank wants to know if you were born (when, where, and why). I would answer that I was too young at the time to remember such details and that I declined to repeat hearsay evidence. It then asks your age on the next page. This trap for prevaricators is considered extremely clever. You can readily find more of this artful duplication and triplication.

Some application blanks require you to swear at the end. By the time you get that far, however, swearing has become superfluous.

Having filled out my application blank, and affixed a picture looking as little like me as possible, I would march in to see the boss. Now began the second lap in the obstacle race. The main obstacle to be hurdled was usually the secretary.

Most secretaries believe that their supreme function in life is to keep any and all comers away from the boss. Here are the stock replies:

9:30 Mr. Watses hasn't come in yet.
10:00 He's in but he's in conference.
10:30 I can't disturb him now. He's dictating.
11:00 Mr. Watses had to go to a meeting. Is there any place where we can call you?
11:30 Mr. Watses has gone to lunch.
12:00 Mr. Watses is at lunch.
12:30 Mr. Watses is at lunch.
1:00 Mr. Watses is at lunch.
1:30 Mr. Watses is at lunch.
2:00 Mr. Watses is at lunch.
2:30 Mr. Watses hasn't come back from lunch yet. (Possibly he has eaten too much lunch to move.)
3:00 Mr. Watses is tied up for the afternoon. Would you care to leave a message? (By this time you are ready to be tied up too.)
3:30 Mr. Watses has left for the day.

I am still applicating. Our paternal government, whatever its shortcomings in assuring its citizens of work, has never denied a jobless man the right to fill out an application blank.

Yugoslavia's Hour

By Andre Visson

Her Fate Hangs On Unity

THE AUTHOR of this article was among the few who were convinced that the Serbs would never betray their traditions and sacrifice their independence without fighting.

Any foreigner who lived among the Serbs and who could speak their language would have been sure of their resistance to Hitler's dictates.

How then could Prince Paul, who was not only Serb but a Karageorgevich—member of a family which symbolized Serbia's fighting spirit—have misjudged to such a point his own people?

Many Serbs had been reproaching him for years for having got estranged from them, for having become too cosmopolitan.

He was, in fact, cosmopolitan by his Russian—or even more Italian than Russian—mother, by his education at Oxford and by his artistic trend.

On the other hand, his frail health did not allow him to follow the military traditions of Karageorgevich. He preferred ancient pictures to war maps. And the French impressionists were more familiar to him than the instructors of the French military school of Saint Syr, where his uncle, Peter I; his father, Prince Arsene, and his cousin, Alexander I, were trained.

To these educational and temperamental factors ought to be added the regrettable influence exerted on him by two women: His wife and his mother-in-law.

Princess Olga was extremely unpopular among the Serbs. They bitterly reproached her for behaving as if she were the first lady of the kingdom. They accused her of nourishing most dangerous ambitions in her husband. It is impossible, of course, to say whether these accusations were justified or not. Personally, for instance, I believe that Prince Paul was a weakling, but an honest man, who was prepared for any sacrifice in order to save the exterior and internal peace of the kingdom he had to hand over in September to his young nephew.

IT IS CERTAIN, nevertheless, that his wife's attitude was one of the many reasons why Queen Marie four years ago established her home in a duplex apartment of a Chelsea house, in London—officially to be nearer to her two boys, who are still in an English school.

As to Prince Paul's mother-in-law, Grand Duchess Helena of Russia, she maintained most friendly relations with Goering and for years endeavored to convince Paul that Hitler was the only man who could have saved Europe from communism.

The mystic side of Paul's character, which he inherited from his mother, Aurore Demidoff, Princess of San Donato, sometimes reacted on these appeals from his mother-in-law.

Paul, who was otherwise most pro-British by his background, was influenced by the Germans also through the medium of his brother-in-law, the Bavarian Count Toerring von Jettelsbach, a cousin of Leopold of the Belgians and married to Princess Olga's sister, Elisabeth.

As to the Yugoslav politicians' influence on Paul, two men especially were close to him, since he dismissed in February, 1939, Milan Stoyadinovich, who had been his confidant but who had become too overconfident and pro-totalitarian.

One of these two men, Msgr. Anton Koroshetz, leader of the Slovene Catholic Party and Yugoslavia's most influential "appeaser," died three months ago.

The other is still alive. It is Dr. Vladimir—(Vlatko, as the Croatians call him)—Machek, who has to decide, in these fateful days on Yugoslavia's future.

I EXPLAINED in my previous article on Yugoslavia that Dr. Machek is not pro-Nazi. Excepting the small minority "Frankovci," reaching hardly 5 per cent, and whose leader, Ante Pavelich, living in Italy, dreams to become, with the Axis' help, the Croatian Quisling, there are no pro-Nazi Croatians.

But the Croatians, who have otherwise many good qualities—they are industrious people with fine artistic trend—have lived unfortunately for centuries with a complex of inferiority.

They are courageous, but for nine centuries they have not fought under their own flag. For centuries they lived with the obsession of obtaining home rule. The Hapsburgs deceived them by sacrificing them to the Hungarians. The Hungarians deceived them by giving them a mere fiction of a phantom home rule. The Serbs deceived them because they did not obtain in Yugoslavia immediately what they expected. They wanted simultaneously a most complete home rule and participation in the highest administration of the new state.

The Serbs, especially the military men, who by their blood and by sacrifices of several generations made possible the reunion of the Serbs with the Croatians and the Slovenes in Yugoslavia, wanted to maintain control of the Yugoslav military and diplomatic apparatus till there should rise a new Croatian generation brought up in Yugoslav spirit, in a Yugoslav state.

Serbian military leaders were somehow suspicious of former functionaries and officers of the Austro-Hungarian Empire.

And that is why the Croatian politicians, surrounding Dr. Machek, are so suspicious of the Serb generals.

Honest, but typically "borough" politicians, they cannot realize that at this historic hour when the problem is how to save Yugoslavia's freedom and thus contribute to freeing Europe, it is worse than a crime—as it is a stupidity—to be worried exclusively over Croatian home-rule.

Nothing, moreover, indicates that this home rule is in danger.

THE THREE MILITARY leaders of the Serb revolt—Gen. Dushan Simovich the new prime minister; Gen. Petar Kossich, chief of the general staff and King Peter's military governor, and Gen. Bogoljub Ilich, who became the new war minister, have today only one thought: how to organize most quickly and most efficiently the defense of Yugoslavia against any Axis aggression. And for such a defense the unity of Yugoslavs is of the vital importance.

The menace to Croatian home rule cannot certainly come from the civil members of Gen. Simovich's government.

Neither Micha Trifunovich, leader of Serb Radicals, nor Milan Grol, leader of the Democrats, nor the white-haired, wise Momchilo Ninchich, one of the best Yugoslav experts on international affairs, nor Slobodan Jovanovich, rector of Belgrade's university, commonly called "Serbia's intellectual conscience"—all men who fought together with Dr. Machek for Croatia's home rule, will threaten it at the hour when all their thoughts are directed to preserve Yugoslavia's unity and independence.

It must be hoped for Croatia's future and honor, that the Croatain politicians will not commit the fateful error of the Slovaks.

Some friends of Dr. Machek fear that in case of war Croatia would become the first Yugoslav battlefield and would have to be abandoned to Germans—the efficient defense of Yugoslavs being possible only in southern Serbia on the Greek and Bulgarian borders, with assistance to the Greeks in order to clear Albania of Italians—and that Ante Pavelich would come to Croatia with the Axis forces and would seize Machek's place as leader of the Croatian people.

Fortunately, other Croatian politicians, as Dr. Ivo Shubashich, governor of Croatia, who fought in the World War on the Salonika front, with late King Alexander, are decided if necessary to fight together with the Serbs, to save both Yugoslavia's independence and Croatia's honor.

As to the 1,200,000 Slovenes, though they are deeply pacifistic by temperament and though they know that in case of war, they will be, being placed between Italy and Germany, the first victim of Axis aggression, they are wholeheartedly with the Serbs.

One of the main moving stimuli of the Slovenes is their hatred for the Italians, who oppress a Slovene minority of 400,000-500,000 men in Trieste Province.

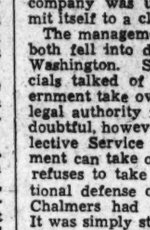
The Croatian minority in Italy is far from being so important. It must be hoped, however, that the feeling of their responsibility before history will prevent the Croatians from committing an error which would be in tragic contradiction to the ideology of all their past leading men, ardent partisans of Yugoslav unity, such as Bishop Strossmayer, their great poet Mazuranich, and their great statesman Ante Trumbich, who in the last war signed with the famous Serbian Prime Minister Nikola Pachich the declaration of Serbo-Croatian cooperation, which has become the cornerstone of Yugoslavia.

"Tough" On Strikes

By Ernest K. Lindley

U. S. Takes Stand

THE GOVERNMENT has begun to get "tough" with the defense strike problem. This attitude will be applauded throughout the country. But it is doubtful whether the first display of toughness—in the Allis-Chalmers case—was well managed.



LINDLEY

The Allis-Chalmers strike began January 22. The management of this concern is notoriously backward in its labor relations. The union is green, apparently not altogether responsible, and perhaps tinged with Communism. On the merits, a nonpartisan observer could not muster any enthusiasm for either side of the controversy. Clearly the stoppage had to be ended. It has cost precious days in the delivery of turbo-generators for the Army's new powder plant at Radford, Va., and of generators and other equipment for the Navy.

But weeks ago the OPM, through Sidney Hillman, proposed a formula whereby work could be resumed while negotiations continued. R. J. Thomas, president of the United Auto Workers, C. I. O., and Allan Haywood, organization director of the C. I. O., went to Milwaukee and persuaded the union members to accept it.

Thomas Burns, representing OPM, told the workers that if they accepted the proposal, Government pressure would be brought on the management to obtain its compliance. The workers accepted the proposal, but the company turned it down.

A controversy ensued over a phrase used by Hillman. The company was unwilling to commit itself to a closed shop.

The management and the union both fell into deeper disfavor in Washington. Several high officials talked of having the Government take over the plant. The legal authority for such a step is doubtful, however. Under the Selective Service Act, the Government can take over a plant which refuses to take and turn out national defense orders. But Allis-Chalmers had taken the orders. It was simply strike-bound.

But—and this is the important point—there is no evidence that real pressure was brought on the management after the union accepted the OPM proposal to resume work. Instead, the haggling continued.

FINALLY the President set up his National Defense Mediation Board. After he had done that, Knudsen and Secretary Knox suddenly ordered that work be resumed in the Allis-Chalmers plant. They did this just after Hillman had left Washington and was en route to Florida. And they did it immediately after Knudsen had conferred lengthily with the head of the company in Washington, in the absence of anyone representing either the union or organized labor generally.

A high official admitted the next day that the Knudsen-Knox order was sent as a direct result of the disclosures of fraud in union balloting. The fraud is inexcusable and will hurt organized labor. But the avidity with which Messrs. Knudsen and Knox leaped through this opening is in sad contrast to their public record in dealing with management.

An authority on the case has said privately that the Government has enough to "hang" both the management and the union. Knudsen and Knox proceeded to hang the union.

By the time this is published, the strike will either have been broken or the union will have proved its real strength. Either way, a bitter taste will linger in the mouths of C. I. O. labor leaders. The ugly word "double-cross" is being hurled at Knudsen—and by men within the OPM organization. Maybe it is utterly unjustified. Perhaps Hillman saw what was coming and ducked. His close aides insist that he did not. Other sources say that Secretary of Labor Perkins was at the point of certifying this case to the new mediation board.

THE ALLIS-CHALMERS case would have been a hard one for the defense mediation board to tackle first. But the board was created to handle hard cases. Its composition assures far greater public support for its recommendations than can be won by Knox and Knudsen. Probably its members felt a momentary sense of relief when they found that Knudsen and Knox had stepped in ahead of them. But this intervention may complicate their task.

Labor has been extremely patient about many things during the last few years. As an example, take the Bethlehem Steel situation. On August 14, 1939, after protracted hearings, the National Labor Relations Board held that the Employe Representation Plan of Bethlehem Steel is a company union. The company appealed to the District of Columbia Court of Appeals. Since then, there have been more than 60 delays in the court review of the case, flowing from motions made by the company. The case was not argued until February 17, 1941. The decision may come down this week, but even so more than a year and a half will have elapsed since the NLRB decision. Here is the full course of the law—long and dreary and studded with all the technical obstacles that high-priced lawyers can contrive. And an appeal to the Supreme Court is still possible.

There was no law whatsoever behind the Knox-Knudsen order to Allis-Chalmers to resume work.

No one can deny that uninterrupted production for defense is a supreme requisite for the national safety. But if it has to be obtained by crack-downs, a few on the heads of stubborn law-evading managers of industry would go a long way toward convincing labor that national defense is not being used for ulterior purposes by some of the industrialists and employer-minded politicians who have been brought into the Government during the last nine months.

Hopkins' General Staff

WHILE NO governmental agency can be judged except by its works, it is at least certain that the "central staff" Harry L. Hopkins has been quietly gathering around him possesses great potential importance. For it may fill the aching void which has existed in the center of the Administration ever since the American war effort began.

ALSOP

The nature of this void is simple. The creaking governmental machinery has been suddenly required to produce a tremendous, quite abnormal head of power. It has badly needed a supercharger, to keep it up to the mark. Because the President has been too preoccupied with the endless routine of his office, no such supercharger has been created. But now, if all goes well, Hopkins' central staff will be the supercharger, collecting data for Presidential decisions on grand strategy, tackling war problems as they arise instead of when they become too acute to be ignored, and in general pushing the effort forward on a broad front.

THE CENTRAL staff's history, to date, is brief. Having been the chief apostle of compromise in the President's immediate circle, Hopkins suffered a complete conversion during his three weeks in Britain with Winston Churchill. Returning to this country a burning advocate of all-out aid for Britain, he wanted to help. Accordingly, when the President made the Secretaries of State, Treasury, War and Navy a four-man War Cabinet to administer the lease-lend law, he named Hopkins the War Cabinet's secretary. And even before the lease-lend law was enacted, Hopkins began to recruit assistants, borrowing a lawyer, Oscar Cox; an economist, George Haas, and an expert on British needs, Philip Young, all from the Treasury, and a military expert, Maj. Gen. James H. Burns, from the War Department.

This quartet and Hopkins immediately started work with the "plus-four committee," as Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson nicknamed the War Cabinet. Together they drew up the rough British-American joint production schedule, arranged the transfers of war materials to Britain under the lease-lend law, and prepared the $7,000,000,000 aid-Britain appropriation bill. Meanwhile the President had conferred on them an even broader responsibility, asking them to serve as generators of long-term war policy. For this purpose a permanent staff was obviously required.

"I want to keep everything fluid for a while," was Hopkins' slogan in the discussions of organization preceding his departure on the President's vacation cruise. Nevertheless, subject to radical change by him, a tentative outline of the permanent staff's organization had already emerged before he left.

If the outline is followed, a small group of young officials—energetic, imaginative and experienced in war problems, as Cox is, for example—will be the heart of the permanent staff. Relieved of routine duties, they will be the idea men, personal assistants and general secretariat of Hopkins and the plus-four committee. Then, working with them, will be a somewhat larger number recruited from the various departments concerned in the defense effort, chosen for their closeness to the department's heads, and charged with representing the departments on the central staff and the central staff in the departments. They will be the liaison men, tying the war effort together and pushing it forward everywhere. And finally, bringing the personnel of the central staff up to not more than 50, there will be small legal and statistical divisions.

HOPKINS is so determined to retain flexibility in his staff that as yet there are no plans to bring the organization under one roof. The staff members, even the general secretariat, will probably continue for some time in their old offices, and Hopkins will still use his White House bedroom as his headquarters. Thus the organization is likely to be affiliated with a certain formlessness and lack of continuity. Furthermore, although while preparing the steps to be taken after passage of the lease-lend bill Hopkins regularly worked 10 hours a day, his poor health is bound to limit the effectiveness of the new body.

Nevertheless, the great potential importance of the central staff cannot be questioned. Hitherto, because of the press of petty daily business, basic war problems have been neglected until they became urgently acute. Even now, for example, the OPM has not received a really detailed breakdown of material requirements, with deadlines for delivery. The basic war problems are not insoluble. But the intelligence and energy to tackle them have simply not been available.

Now, however, if the central staff does its job properly, an impressive amount of intelligence and energy will be specifically devoted to considering the big questions of war strategy. The President, through Hopkins, who has daily access to him, can be warned of what is coming long before the questions present themselves to him. The views of the various departments can be collected, and, insofar as possible, reconciled. Careful memoranda can be prepared on alternative policies. And in short, decisions can be promptly and wisely reached, because the data behind the decisions will come to the President, not as a babble and clamor from competing departments, but in organized, reasonably intelligible form.

Elmer Twitchell And The News Reels

"I yield to nobody in my admiration of President Roosevelt as one of the most effective orators of all time," declared Elmer Twitchell, fresh from a newsreel. "He is a master of fluency. He probably sways more people than any other one man on earth today. But I think somebody ought to warn him that a change of style is so pronounced in the newsreels of recent addresses that it ain't doing him any good.

"It may be due to bad shooting by the cameraman, of course, and I guess we all look a little distorted when we're magnified on a newsreel screen, but I can't escape the impression that Franklin is also at fault. Anyhow, whereas he used to seem in the pictures to be one of the most natural, streamlined, wholly sincere speakers of all time, without affectation or self-consciousness, those newsreel shots of the past few months make him seem to be acting, striking attitudes and reaching for effects in a manner wholly unknown to him before."

Elmer was quite unhappy about it. "If there is one speaker on this planet who don't need to be hammy at any time, it is Franklin Delano Roosevelt," he declared with admiration. "Yet the newsreels of his recent speeches make him appear to be watching for audience reactions, looking over his glasses with evident pleasure after a good point, and nodding and grinning with evident self-satisfaction over a well rounded phrase.

"Now to my way of thinking it's all unintentional and Franklin just don't realize his change in style. He's too good a speaker. These 'I guess that will hold 'em' attitudes and pauses have slipped into his routine. And some of his friends ought to tell him. He's always had the best oratorical style in the country and it's a shame to see any screen or stage technique creeping into it."

Hitler Faces A Dilemma

SINCE HE CAME to power eight years ago Adolf Hitler has suffered no diplomatic defeat more dramatic or more far-reaching than that of last Thursday when the Yugoslav army and people rose up in their wrath and kicked out the government which had signed a pact with the Axis.

NOVER

The blow from Belgrade came at a singularly unpropitious moment for both Germany and Italy. Present in Berlin on Thursday was Yosuke Matsuoka, Japan's foreign minister, who had come to look over his nation's No. 1 ally at close range.

The Nazis have been very anxious to impress their visitor. Unless the United States can be forced by complications in the Far East to hold up supplies intended for Great Britain, the victory which Hitler has promised his people this year may not occur. That is why the Germans have been putting great pressure on Japan to exercise their nuisance capacity to the full by launching a drive on Singapore and the Dutch East Indies now. And after Yugoslavia signed the pact with the Axis they could assure Matsuoka that the Balkan situation was about to be cleared up in their favor, thus paving the way for the all-out attack on Great Britain.

THAT PACT has boomeranged. What happened in Yugoslavia on Thursday has struck the German and Italian dictatorships at a very vital point—their prestige. By the bold logic of the situation Yugoslavia should have caved in under Axis pressure. She is all but surrounded by the Axis. Her army is not a fifth the size of the German army alone. And the Yugoslav forces are sadly lacking in the mechanized equipment and planes which Germany has in such abundance. That a nation so much under the guns of the Third Reich should have defied the Axis must constitute for Hitler an intolerable development calling for drastic reprisals.

Already the nature of the punishment which Hitler plans to mete out to the heroic Serbs is indicated by actions taken in Berlin. German residents in Yugoslavia, including wives of diplomatic officials at Belgrade, have been ordered home. The air line between Germany and Yugoslavia has been suspended, as has German navigation at the Yugoslav end of the Danube. And the German press has begun to play up alleged Yugoslav maltreatment of German citizens. These developments point to an early German attack on Yugoslavia. But that does not necessarily follow.

IT MAY BE THAT Hitler hopes through such a campaign of intimidation to weaken Yugoslavia's will to resist. That he will succeed in doing so is most unlikely, even if Croat particularism prevents Yugoslavia from achieving that full measure of unity which the situation desperately calls for. The Nazis can, of course, be expected to do all they can to divide the nation internally.

As a last resort, Hitler may decide to use force. The Serbs are among the most magnificent fighting men in Europe. Their spirit of fearlessness needs no demonstration after what happened Thursday. It is probable that if war breaks out the German Wehrmacht can sooner or later overrun the country. But such military action would be a very expensive way of face-saving for Hitler. Not only would it mean the establishment of a second front, something which he has desperately sought to avert even to the point of buying off the Russians with large stretches of territory and other concessions, it would also mean the doom of Italy in Albania.

He can, therefore, be expected to exhaust every diplomatic device before ordering his armies to march.

The Yugoslav army could not and probably would not try defending the whole of their country. The most defensible area lies in the mountainous south where German mechanized equipment could not operate with anything like the efficiency it did in the Low Countries and France. And part of the Yugoslav forces could be used to surround the hapless Italians now harassed by the Greeks in Albania.

IF THE HISTORIC event of last Thursday is a bad headache for Hitler it is an even worse one for Mussolini. The very day which saw Yugoslavia lifting high the banner of freedom also saw the fall of Cheren in Italian Somaliland and Harar, second largest city in Ethiopia. Now the Italian forces have abandoned Diredawa.

It is probably only a matter of weeks before British troops and Ethiopian patriots make a triumphal entry into Addis Ababa. In the meantime what is left of the Italian fleet received a bad battering in an encounter with British naval power in the Eastern Mediterranean over the week-end. The entry of Yugoslavia into the war might mark the end of Italy's war effort and make it difficult even for the Gestapo, which now pervades every avenue of Italian life, to keep the rickety structure of fascism standing.

What impression these events of the last week have had on Mr. Matsuoka can easily be imagined. We have a clew in the inspired suggestions from Berlin that unless Japan pitches in and helps the Axis now, the Axis, after victory has been won, won't lift a finger to help Japan. In other words Japan is now reluctant to act. Matsuoka, violently pro-Nazi and pro-Fascist though he is, may begin to have his doubts as to whether that victory will be won at all. Thursday's coup d'etat at Belgrade may well mark a turning point in the history not only of Europe but of the Far East.

Marshalls Give Party Following Horse Show

"The Lenten lull," as far as Washington society is concerned, is passe. This season the usual pre-Easter breathing spell just didn't materialize—so busy are social leaders giving parties-with-a-purpose.

Yesterday afternoon the Chief of Staff of the Army and Mrs. George C. Marshall gathered in a group of horse-loving folk for refreshments at 6 o'clock. The party followed the horse show given yesterday afternoon at Fort Myer for the benefit of the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club of Washington.

Later in the evening Mrs. Truxton Beale entertained at a dinner party at which the ranking guests were the Minister of the Netherlands and Mme. Loudon and Justice and Mrs. Owen J. Roberts.

The guests who dined by candlelight in historic Decatur House, accompanied their hostess later to the lecture at the Willard Hotel given by Byron D. MacDonald, who also showed pictures in color of Greece and the nearby islands. Proceeds of the event went for Greek relief.

A youngster at Mrs. Beale's party who created a great deal of interest was none other than debutante Sarah Alden Derby—granddaughter of the late President Theodore Roosevelt. Miss Derby has come here from Oyster Bay, Long Island, to carve her career as secretary in the office of Representative Joseph Clark Baldwin.

Mrs. Tydings Leaves Tomorrow

A party "without a purpose"—purely social—was the informal supper given by Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings last evening at their home. Mrs. Tydings will leave tomorrow for Palm Beach, Fla., where she will visit her father, Joseph Davies, and Mrs. Davies at their villa, Mara-Lago. Accompanying Mrs. Tydings will be her young son, Joseph Davies Tydings. She plans to be gone several weeks.

But to return to the pleasant party given by Gen. and Mrs. Marshall yesterday afternoon: It was in honor of the exhibitors in the horse show. They arrived tired and thirsty from their stint in the Fort Myer grounds. Mrs. Marshall received them smartly turned out in a gold lame frock, fashioned along shirtwaist lines.

Receiving with Mrs. Marshall, and assisting generally, were Mrs. William Bryden, Mrs. Julian Schley, Mrs. William Gordon, Mrs. Harry Allen, Mrs. Albert Kenner, Mrs. Frank Allen, Mrs. Claude Adams and Mrs. George G. Elms.

Many Attend Marshall Party

The Marshalls' quarters at Fort Myer were abloom with flowers. Substantial turkey and Smithfield ham sandwiches had plenty of customers. An impromptu bar was set up in the dining room. Another popular spot was a small table devoted entirely to various kinds of cheese.

Just to mention a few of the exhibitors attending, there were Maj. Gen. and Mrs. L. J. McNair, Maj. and Mrs. A. L. Castner, Miss Florence Fitzgerald, Lieut. Col. C. H. Gearhart, Commander and Mrs. Forest Sherman, Lieut. W. C. Crane and Miss Lois Crane, Mrs. Ralph Stearley, Mrs. Harris McDowall, Maj. George Elms, who had charge of arrangements for the show; Sherman Flint, Mr. and Mrs. G. J. Holman and John P. Moore.

Being congratulated on her riding was Miss Patricia Henry, who accompanied her parents, Gen. and Mrs. Guy V. Henry. Mrs. Altemus Whitney was among the exhibitors. Others at the party included John P. Moore, F. B. Wrenn, William and Mark Rhinehart, Eric Ateberry, Mr. and Mrs. Howard H. Butz, of Keswick, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. Dan Boone, Miss Margaret Cotter, Fritz Kleeman, D. N. Lee, Aubrey Fishback, Miss Lisbeth Steig and Mr. and Mrs. Samuel E. Bogley.

Willetts' Baby Is Christened

Mr. and Mrs. E. Jean Willett have as their guests for several days their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Tyler Hathaway Willett, who came here from Chicago to have their baby daughter, Susan Hathaway Willett, christened yesterday afternoon.

The christening, which was followed by a family party at the Willett home, took place yesterday at 3:30 o'clock in the Cathedral with Canon Theodore O. Wedel officiating. Serving as godparents were Miss Ellen Graham Knipe, of this city, and Mr. and Mrs. George Robb Collins, jr., of Chicago and Los Angeles.

Arriving in Washington in time for the ceremony was the senior Willetts' daughter, Miss Lillian Willett, who has been sojourning in the South. After a visit to New Orleans during the Mardi Gras celebration she went to Palm Beach, Fla. Here Miss Willett was joined by Miss Mary Elizabeth Tolman. They flew from Florida to Nassau and Havana.

Saturday evening Miss Willett and her brother, William Sherman Willett, entertained at a dinner party in honor of their brother and sister-in-law.

Sydney S. Sherbys Are in Pensacola

Lieut. and Mrs. Sydney S. Sherby are in Pensacola, Fla., where the bridegroom is an instructor at the Naval Air Station. The marriage of the former Miss Jane Harriet Edwards, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Edwards, of Petoskey, Mich., took place March 28 in Miami Beach, Fla., at the Belmar Hotel with the Rev. Coleman Zwitman officiating. Lieut. (J. G.) Sherby is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sherby of this city.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white crepe afternoon frock with a large white off-the-face hat and a corsage of white orchids. She was attended by Miss Phyllis Elizabeth French of Miami. Daniel Sherby of Cleveland, Ohio, served as best man for his brother and Lieut. Stanton Mills Trott, U. S. N., was an usher.

The bride attended Alma College, Mich., and was graduated from Grace Martin's School for Girls in Pittsburgh. Lieut. Sherby was graduated from Devitt Preparatory School, the U. S. Naval Academy, and from Pensacola as a naval aviator several years ago.

MRS. JOHN MARSHALL KERNOCHAN

whose wedding in Williamsburg, Va., was one of the outstanding events of the season. The bride is the former Miss Adelaide Chatfield-Taylor, daughter of the Undersecretary of Commerce and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor. The couple, married Saturday, will make their home in Cambridge, Mass., until June when Mr. Kernochan will be graduated from Harvard University

The Englishes Hold Reunion

Something of a reunion took place yesterday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Merton English on Massachusetts Avenue, where they entertained at a reception with their family—the first time they had all been together for two years.

Between the hours of 4 and 7 o'clock some 600 guests found their way to the English home. Mr. and Mrs. Merton English, jr., were receiving. She wore a black and white chantilly lace frock. John English was home from Albany for the occasion and Mrs. Margaret English Poore had come all the way from the Philippines by way of California. Yesterday she wore a white frock made of heavy Japanese silk. Completing the family circle were Mr. and Mrs. Winton Elliott. She received wearing a chiffon gown of pale blue.

Miss Brown Shows Portraits at Party At Mrs. Tiller's

Several portraits of persons well known in Washington were on display yesterday afternoon at the Mount Pleasant Street home of Mrs. Theodore H. Tiller when the latter entertained at a tea in honor of Miss Mildred Brown, the artist.

A former newspaperwoman, with wide experience in Washington, Miss Brown turned to painting a few years ago and since then has completed several portraits which have attracted much favorable attention.

Mrs. Tiller and her honor guest received in the drawing room, which was decorated with yellow jonquils. Similar blossoms decked the long tea table in the dining room, where the paintings were hung. Portraits on display included those of Mrs. Frank B. Freyer, wife of Rear Admiral Freyer, retired; Ralph Totten, former United States Minister to South America; Edwin M. Brown, grandson of the late Col. E. T. Brown, cousin of the first Mrs. Woodrow Wilson; Jeane Brown, granddaughter of the late Gov. Joseph M. Brown; A. C. Beane, Miss Mimi Scott, daughter of Mrs. Russell Sard, and Mrs. E. L. Hufman. Also in the exhibition was a portrait of Donald McKnew, small son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald McKnew.

Mrs. Forrestal Gives Party for Navy 'Sponsors'

Entertaining informally at a tea yesteday, Mrs. James V. Forrestal, wife of the Undersecretary of the Navy, feted members of the Society of Sponsors of the United States Navy who convened here on Saturday. Today Mrs. Roosevelt will entertain at the White House for the group.

RICHARD WALLACH, JR., of Warrenton, was in Middleburg recently looking over "the situation" of the spring race meeting which will take place in Middleburg on April 12. Dickie Wallach is a famous racing manager who has made a success of hunt race meetings. He manages the Sand Hills meeting and Deep Run at Richmond, which is the first meeting of the many held in Virginia, to take place next Saturday at Curles Neck Farm.

Visitors to Middleburg the past week included Dr. and Mrs. Edward Holmes, of Richmond, who were the guests of Miss Anne Gochnauer at her home in Upperville; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Davidson, also of Richmond, who stayed with Mr. and Mrs. George Robert Slater at their home, West View, near Upperville. Mrs. Davidson was formerly Miss Marion Owens, of Wilmington, Del., namesake and niece of Mrs. Marion Douglas, of Warrenton, and her mother was formerly Miss Mattie Payne, of Warrenton. Mrs. Davidson has spent much time in Warrenton, where she has many friends.

EDWARD SHIRLEY TURNER and Lloyd Noland Tabb flew to New York in Mr. Turner's plane a week ago yesterday for a few days' visit, with Mr. Turner piloting. They returned to Middleburg on Tuesday evening.

V. M. I. polo team left Lexington, Va., for Fort Myer on Wednesday morning and played a game of indoor polo there that evening. It was V. M. I.'s first try at the indoor game and they were most enthusiastic about it. Those who came on to play included Bill Emory, jr., R. V. Jacobs, Harry Stengele, Tom Fletcher and R. Searcy, Lieut. J. Mack Tabb, of Middleburg, instructor at V. M. I., went with the young men as coach.

Mrs. Josephine Shiner, of Denver, Colo., and Miss Rosemary Wright, of Washington, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Paul Llewellyn at their home, Pen-Y-Byrn, near Rectortown.

Miss Barbara Brown, of Randolph-Macon Women's College, Lynchburg, is visiting her uncle and aunt, Dr. and Mrs. H. A. Spitler, in Middleburg, for her spring vacation. Mrs. Spitler entertained members of the woman's auxiliary to the Medical Society at her home on Friday afternoon, after a business meeting there was an election of officers for the coming year.

Mrs. Carhart Enters Hunter For Steeplechase

One of the first entries for the Raymond Belmont National Hunter Championship Steeplechase of 4 miles over a specially designed timber course, laid out by the Middleburg Hunt race committee for its meeting on "Glenwood Park Course," Saturday, April 12, near Middleburg, Va., was that of Mrs. Amory Carhart, of Warrenton. Mrs. Carhart, wife of the master of Warrenton Hunt, has entered her hunter, Sir Romeo, a veteran of many hunting seasons, which was started on several occasions last season in some of the country's leading timber contests.

The Belmont National Hunter championship race has been designed for hunters, of the fox-hunting fields, and riders, regular followers of recognized hunts. The course is an intricate hunter trial layout, with circuitous turns and 26 stoutly made timber fences. Every type of trial found on a good day with hounds is to be found in the course over which America's finest hunting-hunters will race over on April 12, at "Glenwood Park." The Middleburg committee, which includes Oliver Filley, of New York and The Plains, Va.; Paul Mellon, of Upperville, Va.; Louis Leith, Jack Skinner, Gerald B. Webb, jr., and Mr. Sands, all of Middleburg, has spent many months in properly devising the conditions and course for the first running of the Raymond Belmont Memorial National Hunter Championship Chase. Every possible effort has been made to curtail the speed of the present day timber race, making for a severe test of the hunting man riding his hunting horse.

When the starters of the Belmont National Championship Chase go postward, it is believed that more than a score will be in the big field, all turned out in pink coats and riding for the glory of winning for their respective hunt, as well as the winner's share of the $1,000 Hunt Paneling Fund benefit purse. The hunt which has entered the winning horse will receive $700 of this purse to use for improvement of its hunting country.

Miss Kravadze Gives Party For Princess

Two merry cocktail parties went on the boards yesterday afternoon. Miss Helen Kravadze entertained between the hours of 5 and 7 o'clock in honor of Princess Alexandra Kropotkin, widely known magazine columnist, who is down here for a whirlwind two days from New York.

Miss Mimi Worthington gathered in a strictly young-set group from 5 until 7 o'clock to honor Miss Courtney Owens, who has just returned to town from a visit to North Carolina.

Princess Kropotkin Guest of Honor

The Madison Room of Wardman Park Hotel was the scene of Miss Kravadze's party yesterday afternoon. The hostess and her guest of honor received just inside the door. Miss Kravadze had chosen a smart frock fashioned with a gray jersey blouse and gayly striped paper taffeta skirt. A chartreuse bow in her hair completed the ensemble. Princess Kropotkin wore a navy sheer frock with a square neckline edged in white moire, repeating the accent on the cuffs.

Champagne punch was served from a semicircular table arranged at one end of the pleasant room. Centering the table—where all manner of canapes were arranged—was a large bouquet of pink gladioli and carnations. Assisting the hostess throughout the afternoon were Countess Lisa Heiden, Mme. Masha Boborykine, Miss Annabelle MacLeod, Mrs. Moran Drury and Miss Mary Senate Howes.

Miss Worthington Party Hostess

Meanwhile Miss Worthington's party, given at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Y. Worthington, was in full swing. Assisting the young hostess and her guest of honor was Miss Elizabeth Langlais.

Among the youngsters who dropped in during the afternoon were the Misses Marion and Peter Norris, Donald May, Logan and Eugene Owens, Clarence Dodge, jr., Miss Dorothy Shelton, Lowell Bradford, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard May, William Escavaille, Susan Slinghuff and Miss Jane Davis.

Lula Walton Engaged to Wed

Dr. and Mrs. Harold M. Walton, of Takoma Park, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Lula Marie Walton, to Mr. Herbert Arthur Walls, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert A. Walls, of Vineland, N. J. The date of the wedding will be announced later.

Both Miss Walton and Mr. Walls are attending the Washington Missionary College. Mr. Walls is majoring in history and education, and will complete his collegiate work in May.

Capital Whirl

By Sally Swift

WEEKEND COCKTAIL parties popped up all over Washington like crocuses in spring, the spring which we hear about but still don't see. One of the gayest of the weekend crop was the cocktail party given by Mrs. George Rublee in honor of Mrs. Shaw Parker and her house guest, Mrs. Mary Hand Churchill. Mrs. Churchill, daughter of the well-known Judge Learned Hand, of New York, is most attractive and is no stranger to Washington. I remember a very pleasant luncheon party given by John Foster in her honor last year, as well as a number of other informal parties.

Mrs. Rublee, with her usual flair for mixing people, had gathered guests of varied interests under her hospitable roof. Among them were Robert Flaherty, director of the fascinating movies "Nanook of the North" and "Elephant Boy." Mrs. Harold Callender, who until the war began exhibited her superb animal sculptures each spring at the Royal Academy in London, and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sears—he an architect and she an actress—just finished playing in a Saroyan play. There was also Raymond Geist, now at the State Department, who was Charge d'Affaires at the U. S. Embassy in Berlin during some difficult moments, and Robert Pell, also of the State Department, who has been of much servic in several countries on the Refugee Commission, part of the time as assistant to Mr. Rublee.

Also present were the Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Bruggmann; the Greek Minister, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burling and the Edward Burlings, jr.; Mrs. Stephen Childs, Mrs. Lewis Clark, Mme. Fotitch, and Mrs. Ray Atherton. Others were Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding, Mrs. Donald Hiss, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Villard, Richard Sanger, Herbert Elliston, and Edward Russell.

MRS. SHAW PARKER was being congratulated on the success of the cocktail party which she had given the day previous when each man invited was told he must give some article of his clothing for sale at the forthcoming Piccadilly Arcade. One man never came to Mrs. Parker's cocktail party at all because he thought he was expected to do an Ann Corio. Other less jittery gentlemen arrived at Mrs. Parker's with bundles containing their second-best tweeds and soon there was a comfortable pile of men's wear for the R. A. F. benefit. A tragedy was averted when Mrs. Parker caught one of her feminine guests absent-mindedly adding her new, and only, fur jacket to the heap and warned her of its fate.

Mrs. Parker looked very smart in a beige tailleur with wide white revers and another chic lady was Mrs. Marion Warburg in a black wool frock with a purple belt and a matching purple hat. Among Mrs. Parker's other guests were Countess Palffy, Mrs. Anthony Rumbold, Miss Barbara Wace, Miss Anne Perin, John Foster, David van Buren, Derek Hoyer Millar and several more.

When Mrs. Anthony Crossley asked friends to her little, white, blue-shuttered house in Georgetown the other afternoon she served a very special cocktail which she concocted herself. She guards the formula so carefully that she won't allow anyone in the room when she mixes it. When pressed for details of the ingredients, Mrs. Crossley opens her eyes wide and says, "It's simply nothing but fruit juice."

REVELLING IN THE JOB of caring for the guests' coats were the two elder of the three Crossley children. Their mother has put them in school in Washington for the duration and they are thoroughly enjoying themselves. The first person I saw at Mrs. Crossley's fireside was Mrs. George Howe, looking pretty and sun-tanned after her trip to Florida. Then Mrs. Arthur Krock arrived, another returned traveler from the South. Mrs. Krock has been visiting the Harry Luces on their plantation in South Carolina, when Noel Coward was one of the house party. New additions to Washington, and sure to be popular, are the Henry Fields. She is a recent bride and so very pretty. Others dropping by Mrs. Crossley's were Lady Maureen Noel, Mrs. A. D. Marris, Miss Veronica Morrison-Bell, Arthur Krock, George Howe, William Elmslie, Jack Segar, Gordon Etherington-Smith and John Underwood.

Spring Suits Show Up Poor Figures

Waist and Hips Need Reducing For New Styles

By Ida Jean Kain

IT'S HIGH time to be firm about your figure. Mink or bunny, a winter coat covers a lot of latitude. But in a spring suit, you are forced to view your curves in a colder light. The styles adhere strictly to the lines of the figure—waists are fitted and, since shoulders are not so padded, hips must be slimmer than ever.

Today starts a series of articles entitled "A New Figure For Spring," which will run for three weeks and will furnish a pattern by which you can make yourself over from tip to toe. The daily slimming menus are better than sulphur and molasses. They give you your full share of fresh fruits, vegetables, green salads and all the other protective foods, and are high in protein to help you to lose at a fast clip.

Your slimming and trimming must be individualized to meet your particular needs. You may be overweight generally, or just in places. But basically the program is a balanced diet with calories adjusted to your needs, plus an exercise technique that hits the spots.

Slim Down In 3 Weeks

In the three weeks you can slim off a dozen pounds, take two inches—maybe three—off the waist and another three off the hips. That will make a delightful change in you.

But there won't be any change unless you wake up. You'll just go blithely along under the impression that no alterations are needed. It would open your eyes to overhear someone say of you:

"Hasn't that girl an attractive face—for such an ungodly figure!"

That actually happened to one young woman awhile back. Suddenly she realized that her weight had gone steadily up. When she was a bride five years before, she weighed a slim 118 punds, but at the time of the bolt from the blue she tipped the scales at an overly plump 178.

Right then she started to count calories and to take special calisthenics. In a few months she has brought her weight down to 138 pounds and she intends to keep on until it's 125 pounds, perfect for her structure. She tells me that her husband is as proud of her new figure as she is.

Any woman who lets her figure go is just foolish. It is so easy to take off the extra weight and slim down the bulges. As a finishing touch of glamour for the program there will be a posture routine with rules for sitting, standing and walking. If you were paying to be made over at a de luxe beauty salon, these would be drilled into you.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

The Boomerang

She—I wish you'd listen to the way Viola's banging the dishes in there.

He—What's the matter with her?

She—She's mad because we're going to have company tonight.

He—I'd certainly put a stop to that. Why do you stand for her tantrums, anyway?

She—Well, of course, she is good at times——.

He—Oh, yes. You're always making excuses for her. The trouble with you is you let her walk all over you.

She—Sh-h! She'll hear you.

He—I don't care if she does. If you had any spine at all you'd tell her just where to get off.

She—Then she'd leave.

He—Not on your life. She'd respect you all the more.

She—I can't take a chance on that—with the Sunshine Pals coming here next week.

He—You don't mean you're going to entertain them again!

She—Well, yes. Mrs. Twitty was to have them, and then her sinus got so bad——.

He—Of all the easy marks!

She—Well, what could I say—when they asked to come?

He—You could tell them to go jump in the lake. I never in my life saw such a person to be stepped on. I'd have some guts.

She—Oh, well, it'll all be all right—if the man would only come to paint the kitchen.

He—You don't mean he hasn't come yet! Why don't you call the realty company?

She—I have—several times.

He—Did you tell 'em we'd move if they didn't send someone right away?

She—We-ll, not exactly.

He—Of all the—well, I won't say it. If you want to let everybody run over you it's all right with me.

She—I'll call them again today.

He—Yes, and when you do don't be so mealy mouthed. Tell 'em if they don't do something right away they can take their old house and go jump in the lake with it.

She—Well, I wouldn't care a great deal if we did move. We could get away from the Tartars. That little Buddy is ruining Junior, and he pulls my flowers and throws snakes in my lily pool.

He—Why don't you tell his mother to stop him?

She—Then she'd be mad at me.

He—Then I'd tell her to go jump in the lake.

She—I can't be quarreling with the neighbors. Besides, you always say you don't like fussy women—that a woman's first duty is to be charming.

He—This is different. You've got to stand up for your rights!

She—How can a woman be charming and stand up for her rights?

He—She doesn't have to be an angleworm. You let everybody bully you. It makes me actually ashamed.

She—Oh, it does, does it?

He—Yes. I'd think more of you, and so would everybody else, if you had some backbone.

She—Oh, I see!

He—Yes, I'd like to see you stand up to people, and if they don't like it let 'em go jump in the lake.

She—All right.

He—Say, where's my pipe?

She—What pipe?

He—The one I had here in the window sill.

She—Oh, I threw that away.

He—Threw it away?

She—Yes. You hadn't used it for so long . . . and it was so smelly . . . and besides, you have so many others.

He—You—you mean you actually threw my pipe away?

She—I certainly do.

He—Well, of all the—say, what do you mean, throwing my things away?

She—I mean I'm not going to have any smelly old pipes cluttering up my window sills.

He—Say, what's the matter with you?

She—Nothing, except that I am tired of having a lot of dirty old pipes around.

He—Have you gone crazy?

She—And I'm going to throw them away whenever I feel like it, and if you don't like it you can go jump in the lake!

Learn to Design Smart Dresses

AMERICAN designers are now stepping into their own. It's fame and fortune for the girl who displays unusual talent in this glamorous field.

And any girl with a knack for clothes can give her talents a trial by home study in dress designing, by creating clothes for herself and her friends.

Charts and diagrams show how to flatter the figure with becoming lines, how to drape your pattern.

Designing a dress, your first step may be to sketch your idea. You decide on the basic lines you'll use—perhaps a diagonal line for the blouse of the dress. Such diagonal lines, you learn, give a dynamic feeling to a style. Or you may curve them for a softer, more graceful effect.

Then in your next stage you carry out your idea in muslin, cutting and pinning on a dummy. This gives you a chance to experiment in placing fullness, in locating trimming. When you have a perfectly fitting muslin pattern you trace it on paper, make a pattern from which the final lovely gown can be cut.

Furs Being Tinted For Evening Wear

Hollywood, Calif.—Many of the important furs for spring are being tinted for evening wear or to mantle light airy clothes for daytime. A capelet of ermine, for example, is taking a light shade of aquamarine or pink.

Geraldine Fitzgerald, the star of "Shining Victory," has one of these tinted wraps in white fox. Here is a cape with the tips dyed a rich rosy tan while the neck remains white to form an effective circle at the shoulders.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman Learns, After Six Months' Courtship, That Her Admirer Is 14 Years Her Junior; He Loves Her And She Is Very Fond of Him; Now, What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Eight months after coming to this city to live, I met a nice young man with whom I immediately started keeping company. We have been going together for about six months now, and he seems to be very devoted to me. In fact, he says he is very much in love with me. But recently I learned, greatly to my surprise, that he is 14 years younger than I.

On making this discovery, I told him I wanted to discontinue the friendship, because (as I explained to him), I think in time he would no longer care for me. Although he knows how old I am, he wants to go on seeing me as before. I like him very much and I must say he looks older than his years. What do you think I should do? JANE.

DEAR JANE: The fact that you are 14 years older than a grown man means, of course, that you are a definitely mature woman. Among the several advantages of maturity are (or should be) the intellectual surety, the social courage and the emotional integrity which permit of ordering one's affairs in accordance with the dictates of one's own common sense and intuition. In the matter of establishing close personal relationships, in particular, it seems to me the mature individual should rely more upon his own judgment than upon the opinions of others. As Shakespeare said: "The friends thou hast, and their adoption tried, grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel."

I feel that it is not for me, nor for anyone save yourself, to decide whether or not you should continue your sentimental friendship with this man who is 14 years your junior. If you were of a philosophical turn of mind, you might reckon that the friendship, in its present form, yielding current dividends of pleasant companionship, was worth perpetuating indefinitely—or for so long as it continued to be a mutually satisfactory alliance.

You might feel, with the poet, that it is wise to "Gather ye rosebuds while you may; Old Time is flying fa." But, if you are one of those cautious or timorous individuals who are always more engrossed in promoting old-age security, as it were, than in gratefully enjoying this day's blessings, then, of course, a continued courtship with this chap must be construed as inadvisable procedure for you.

The considerable disparity in your ages argues against the possibility of the relationship's developing into a life-lasting companionship—on the basis of either friendship or marriage. But it is possible that serene acceptance of the goods the gods are providing, in this instance (i. e., the young man's devoted companionship in the present) would make you much more attractive, poised and lighthearted than you would be without such attention, and thus indirectly might lead to the development of a more suitable romance.

In my opinion, the fact that the young man "looks older than his years" has no decisive bearing on the real issue, which revolves around the question of whether you stand to reap more loss than profit, both socially and subjectively, from indefinitely continued (and, perhaps, undefined) association with him. The fact that he knows your age, and still insists on "courting" you, suggests that he is attracted by qualities in your personality which seem to him far more important than ephemeral and skin-deep "girlish charm." If such is the case, it would seem querulous and petty to renounce the possibility of a fine and perhaps long-time friendship, simply because conventional romance and marriage are unthinkable.

I judge the situation amounts to this: You are a matrimonially-minded woman and he is your one beau, perhaps the first beau you have had in some time. Therefore, you are weighing and measuring him strictly in terms of matrimonial eligibility, and, in your dismay at finding him falling somewhat short of conventional specifications, you are losing sight of the fact that, even so, he may have great potential social value to you, just as a man friend!

Most attractive women who have passed their thirty-fifth birthday are casually accustomed to the friendly or admiring attention of men who may be as much as 5 to 15 years their junior—providing, of course, that they are meeting many men. Usually it is the confirmed spinster or "wall flower" type of woman who goes into a worried dither when a much younger man seeks to pay her court.

Buying Low-Wattage Bulbs For Home Is Poor Economy

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

UNCLE SAM gets first choice of all resources of the nation, of course, and so, since certain metals needed for the manufacture of lamp sockets are also needed in the defense program, the supply of lamp sockets is being threatened. A serious strike in a big lamp socket factory hasn't helped matters, since about 75 per cent of all the sockets used for portable lamps come from this plant. In short, another pinch of war is in the offing.

Other "light" news in Washington has to do with the efficiency of different types of bulbs. It seems that there's not much economy in buying low wattage bulbs except for halls, closets and such places. In an average room, fewer lamps of higher wattage, for instance, will often provide more satisfactory light at smaller cost, since a single 100-watt bulb gives as much light as two 60-watt bulbs or six 25-watt bulbs.

Dust Reduces Light

Yet that 100-watt bulb will cost about 15 cents, while the two 60-watt bulbs will cost about 26 cents and the six 25-watt bulbs will cost about 60 cents.

Another economy in lighting can be achieved by keeping dust off the lamp bulbs, diffusing bowls and shades, as the dust will cut down the light but not the cost of current. And don't worry about frosted bulbs—they use up no more current than clear glass bulbs.

The real excitement on the lighting front is the color story in fluorescent light. There is already a choice of six different shades of "white" light available, and each has its own place and effect. Before deciding on a light tone, it's best to "try it on." We attended a light conference recently in which three models and various different costumes were shown in different colors of light . . . the different types of lighting made all the difference.

Lighting Can Play Pranks

Apropos of the new lighting, a very la-de-da debut party recently was lighted in the modern fashion, but nobody knew it except the debutante herself, who was dressed and made-up for the light. The other guests, accustomed to incandescent light, looked all washed out, but probably the debutante was all washed up with her friends ever after!

Light plays other tricks, too, by reflecting itself in unexpected ways. A famous restaurant has a red ceiling that drains the color out of the guests' faces. Rose lamp bulbs will do the same thing, making a gay lady look like a faded flower.

Beauty of Eyes Depends on Care, Actress Says

Hollywood, Calif.—Hints for eye beauty from lively Irene Rich are always important, since Irene has the prettiest eyes on the screen.

A nightly treatment to relieve all strain is of prime importance if you have the expressive eyes of the star of "Three Sons O' Guns." After a day at the studio Irene bathes her eyes in a boric acid solution slightly warmed. Follows a gentle rotary massage from a point just beyond the outside corners of the eye up into the hairline.

And for additional sparkle at night Irene drops a bit of castor oil in each eye. She also works a little into her lashes to promote their already luxuriant growth.

Simple Sleeping Togs Liked by Stars

Hollywood, Calif.—Seldom is the news divulged on how a lady looks when she sleeps, but Olivia de Havilland, who rates boudoir togs as important as her loveliest dinner things, is telling it on her closest friends.

According to Olivia, every smart Hollywood girl practices the dictum of "early to bed" when she is working. For studying her script, probably in bed, she likes a warm jacket. Geraldine Fitzgerald's preference, Olivia reports, is for jackets in warm wool jersey lined with smooth satin, such as a very dark green with pink. The satin is quilted and used to face a small winged collar.

Ida Lupino, via our grapevine, says she simply can't sleep in a fancy nightgown. So no lace, no ruffles, but something Puritan-plain with a tailored robe. Niw that pure silk is again available, Ida is wearing a gown in light rose silk with wide corselet band of satin matched in broad shoulder straps. Her robe is of deeper rose flannel.

It's pajamas for Priscilla Lane. And if possible, these will blend wtih her own coloring and the colors of her boudoir. Priscilla has a new pair in sapphire crepe, the trousers banded with red and white small-checked taffeta. A tunic-length morning coat is in taffeta lined with blue.

As for Olivia herself, she describes a Franciscan robe as her current favorite. This is in soft burgundy wool with rope belt.

Howler About Prowler

"Prowler at Mrs. Corby's—Chevy Chase Circle," the police radio blared. Montgomery County cruisers hurried to the scene for Mrs. Corby is beloved of the force because of her many kindnesses. Broken bushes and other evidence showed where the prowler had been. "I've got him" one policeman cried. The intruder was turned over to a restaurant. It was a large opossum.

Notice to Prima Donnas

Private Big, no matter how big he may be in civilian life, will be just another number if the Selective Service Act happens to land him with some 9,000 in the Twenty-Ninth Division at Fort Meade.

Correspondents covering the division have been notified they will not be permitted to "single out" selectees for stories.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

It's highly probable that the Civil Service Commission soon will announce new examinations for female typists and stenographers. No new tests are scheduled, but the commission is being extended in supplying junior stenographers and senior typists. It's estimated that 300 typists and stenographers have been hired here each week in Federal agencies for the past five months. New registers for female typists and stenographers were set up less than four months ago. They contained more than 17,000 names and Civil Service officials predicted the lists would be good for a year.

Just last week, however, the commission began to certify names on the register from over-quota States like Virginia, Maryland, and the District. This means residents from under-quota States on the registers have been certified for jobs, but it doesn't necessarily mean that they were all given jobs. There has been a shortage of male stenographers and typists for weeks and the commission has announced continuous open exams in an effort to supply the demand.

Internal Revenue is slowly liquidating its processing tax division. On July 1, 1940, the division had 175 employes. Today it has only 50. The division is expected to be wiped out within the next three months. No employes are suffering from the liquidation. Jobs have been found for more than 100 employes and 17 others will leave the division when other positions are located for them . . . Three hundred Internal Revenue employes, more than 180 in Washington, passed the non-competitive test for auditor which puts them in line for promotion. Employes who passed the test are eligible for appointment as junior revenue agent. The jobs are in the field and they pay $2,000. The test was limited to bureau employes.

Make no mistake about it, Agriculture Secretary Claude Wickard is personally handling his department's job in providing food for Britain and the other foreign countries. Milo Perkins is doing the purchasing through his Surplus Marketing Administration and Loyd Steere, for years agricultural attache in Berlin and who recently held a similar position in London, is assisting the British negotiations.

Wickard has ordered a survey of the vitamin field. For the job he has hired a New York advertising man, Henry Sell, who has been appointed special consultant to the Secretary. Sell has experimented with vitamins for years.

Kildroy P. Aldrich, chief inspector of the Postoffice Department, gave the Senate Appropriations Committee tell-tale evidence that employes who are worked excessively overtime are compelled to take excessive sick leaves. He explained that his 615 inspectors work an average of 60 hours a week, that their work-year is 290 days compared to 230 days for other postal employes. He asked for an increase of 45 inspectors to lighten the work load.

During the past two years, Aldrich told the committee, sick leave has increased 49 per cent, from 2,301 days in 1939 to 3,439 days in 1940. In the 1940 fiscal year only 39 days of leave without pay were taken by the inspectors. During the past six months, 280 days have been taken. The chief inspector said it was "almost wholly on account of sickness." Work of the inspectors has increased, Aldrich said, because 67 have been detailed to Army camps and defense centers to supervise the mail service.

Representative Case has warned Congress that by waiving existing law on the expenditure of Federal funds "we invite waste, graft, and trouble." He was referring to the waiving of Civil Service requirements on the President's $100,000,000 fund voted by Congress in the Independent Offices Appropriation Bill. The waiver was upheld, which means that the money can be used to hire persons without Civil Service ratings. Case said that the language exempting the fund from Civil Service restrictions was "superfluous" as the President already has clear authority to waive Civil Service rules.

800 at 2 Celebrations Honor Valiant Greeks On 120th Anniversary of Their Independence

500 Hear Travelogue At Willard; Pageant At Pythian Temple

The spirit of Greek independence—its present struggle and the 120th anniversary of the nation's assertion of its freedom—was celebrated last night at two functions here.

More than 500 persons gathered in the ballroom of the Willard Hotel to hear B. D. MacDonald, world traveler and lecturer, describe with the aid of motion pictures the country and the people who are fighting to maintain a democratic way of life.

The Greek Minister, Cimon Diamantopoulos, introduced the speaker. Mrs. Roosevelt headed the list of sponsors of the affair. Mrs. Truxtun Beale was chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements. Proceeds went to aid Greek war victims.

MacDonald took his audience to the Dalmatian coast, to Rhodes, Crete, Corfu, Mount Athos, the Dodecanese Islands and to the heart of the spirit of the Greek people—Athens with its Acropolis.

"They're tough," said MacDonald of the Yugoslavs of the Dalmatian coast. "And the farther inland you go the tougher they become."

If Hitler's legions ever penetrate the country they'll find as warm a welcome as that the Greeks gave the Italians, he intimated. The Yugoslavs have purposely not developed their roads in the fear of invasion, he said.

"The idea of personal liberty was given to us by the Greeks," MacDonald declared. He illustrated the fact through his motion pictures of the people who have created and maintained a democracy on the ruins of one of the world's great civilizations.

Patrons of the affair, besides Mrs. Roosevelt, included:

Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, Chief Justice and Mrs. Hughes, Secretary of State and Mrs. Hull, the Belgian Ambassador and Comtesse Van Der Straten-Ponthoz, the British Ambassador and Viscountess Halifax, the Ambassador of Poland and Mme. Ciecanowska, the Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Close, the Minister of Norway and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, the Minister of Czecho-Slovakia and Mme. Hurban, the Minister of the Netherlands and Mme. Loudon, the Minister of Finland and Mme. Procope, the Minister of Denmark and Mme. De Kauffmann, the Minister of Greece and Mme. Diamantopoulos, the Minister of Australia and Mrs. Casey, the Minister of Luxembourg and Mme. Le Gallais, the Minister of Canada.

Justice and Mrs. Harlan Stone, Justice and Mrs. Owen Roberts, Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Morgenthau, Senator and Mrs. Warren Barbour, Chief of Staff and Mrs. Marshall, Jonkheer and Mme. Van Swinderen, the Countess of Gainsborough, Solicitor General and Mrs. Biddle, Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Berle, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, Mrs. Paul Bartlett, Mrs. Robert S. Brookings, Mrs. Witchell Carroll, Achilles Catsonis, Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Davis, Dean and Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Mrs. William Eustis, Mrs. Felix Frankfurter, Mr. and Mrs. George Garrett, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Hurley, Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, Harold G. Moulton, Mr. and Mrs Gifford Pinchot, Miss Janet Richards, Mr. and Mrs. Eliot Wadsworth, Mr. and Mrs. John Walker, Mrs. David Wing.

Dressed in their native evzone costumes, more than 60 parochial school children celebrated the feats of their fighting cousins at ceremonies commemorating the 120th anniversary of Greek independence at the Pythian Temple, 1012 Ninth Street Northwest. More than 300 persons filled the auditorium.

The unified will of Greece, Great Britain and the United States was symbolized in a pageant by three young girls garbed in the colors of the nations they represented. Songs and recitations were included on the program. The girls were Lorraine Mamakos, 15, the United States; Thelma Stathopoulos, 14, Greece, and Pandora Vakas, 13, Great Britain.

Father Thomas Daniels, pastor of St. Constantine and Helen Greek Orthodox Church, addressed the group in Greek.

"America was not deaf to the appeals of Greece even in 1821," Soterios Nicholson told the group in an address in English. He emphasized that the United States has done much for Greece.

Symphony Opens New Series With Sibelius; Brosa Soloist

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Hans Kindler conducts the National Symphony Orchestra on Sunday afternoon in Constitution Hall. Soloist: Antonio Brosa. Program: Namensfeier. Overture,. Op.. 115 (Beethoven), Violin Concerto in D minor, Op. 47 (Sibelius), Pohjola's Daughter, Op. 49 (Sibelius), Two Liebeslieder Waltzes, Op. 52, Nos. 11 and 12 (Brahms), Akademisches Festoverture, Op. 80 (Brahms).

Beginning the Beethoven-Brahms-Sibelius Festival of three concerts yesterday afternoon in Constitution Hall, Hans Kindler introduced to patrons of the National Symphony Orchestra the Sibelius violin concerto and Antonio Brosa, who played the solo part with eloquence and artistic finesse. The performance of this contemporary work was the apex of a program which included the orchestra's first readings of Beethoven's "Namensfeier" overture and Sibelius' symphonic fantasia, "Pohjola's Daughter." Brahms occupied a tertiary position with two of his familiar "Liebeslieder" waltzes and the "Academic Festival" overture.

BROWN

Once the Sibelius concerto has become familiar to the public, it should prove to be as popular as the Mendelssohn concerto and the G minor of Bruch. It is as attractive as either of those standard works, and it surpasses both of them in subtlety. While it makes no concessions either to tradition or to conventional taste, it has an exhilarating charm that is irresistible. Original in conception and masterly in construction, it demands a proficient soloist and a sensitive conductor, for inadequacy on either side of this combination would distort the finely balanced proportions and completely spoil the effect. That may be one reason why so few violinists have placed it in their repertoire.

Stripped and streamlined, the music may seem at first a little austere, even grim at times, but every auditor must be immediately aware of its exciting and bracing quality. Those who have already learned to like the idiom of Sibelius encounter no difficulty in understanding the concerto which is lucid even in its most unexpected deviations from the norm. One of those deviations occurs with the first note of the violin, which is rhythmically just off the main beat and harmonically dissonant off the tonic chord. Another novel feature is the presence of two cadenzas in the first movement, one marking a transition to the second subject and the other falling in the customary place.

There are no less than eight modulations of key in the first movement, and these changes of harmonic base impart a remarkable fluidity to the emotional fluctuations. The music is in turn meditative, impassioned, peaceful, protestingly angry, despairing and brilliantly exultant. The slow movehas a short and wistful orchestral introduction to a noble melody for the solo instrument, a melody which is thereafter handled with extraordinary effects of counterpoint and cross-rhythms. In the last movement one hears a characteristic Sibelian treatment of two themes and rhythms. The main rondo theme, which Donald Tovey called "a polonaise for polar bears," alternates with a second subject in a continuous contrast between 6-8 and 3-4 time.

The infrequently heard "Namensfeier" overture of Beethoven is stamped with his unmistakable mannerisms. He could not write a minor piece like this without leaving upon it the impress of his personality. The overture, probably composed without any particular person or event in mind, owes its name to the fact that Beethoven offered it to Emperor Franz Josef for the celebration of his "Name Day." It might just as well be called the "Radzivill" overture after the prince to whom it is dedicated.

"Pohjola's Daughter" is one of the tone-poems which resulted from Sibelius' preoccupation with the Kalevala, that composite epic of Finland's legendary lore. Picturesque and colorful, it can be enjoyed either as description of an adventure of the ancient bard, Vainamoinen, or as an abstract tapestry of beautiful tonal weaving.

75,000 Test Staggered Work Hours

21 Departments And 90 Agencies Of U. S. Government Will Be Affected

More than 75,000 of Washington's 160,000 Government employes will come to work early or late this morning and find themselves on time.

A change in the "stagger" system of working hours, which goes into effect today, will see employes of 21 departments and agencies reporting as much as 90 minutes earlier or 75 minutes later than previously. Their home-going schedules will be similarly affected.

Earliest birds of the new order are 6,000 production workers at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing who will begin to trundle out the type and ink at 7:30 a. m. Latest risers are 20,000 employes of 12 agencies, including the Office for Emergency Management, the Board of Tax Appeals, the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. They report at 9:15 a. m.

Twenty-three Offices Changed

Others workers affected by the change will put in unaccustomed appearances at 15-minute intervals between 8 a. m. and 9:15 a. m. Closing times vary from 3:30 to 5 p. m. Twenty-three offices will continue with schedules undisturbed.

The order was issued by President Roosevelt March 19 to help solve some of the District's traffic problems. Instead of 70,000 Federal employes reporting for work at 9 a. m., only 23,000 will hang up their hats at that hour. More than 30,000 War, Treasury and Agriculture workers will turn up at 8:15 a. m., a reporting time not in use before.

Policemen and transit company employes also will readjust their alarm clocks to meet the new transportation problems.

Policement who formerly began pounding the pavement at 8 a. m., will reach specified corners between 7 and 8 a. m., and all early detail traffic officers will report for duty at 7 a. m. instead of 7:30. But most of the officers were in favor of the change despite the loss of "those extra 40 winks." Fewer traffic jams are expected.

Benefits Spread

This will be compensation, too, for motormen and conductors on more than 90 street car and bus lines which will operate on new morning and afternoon schedules.

The total of Federal and private employes expected to come downtown will be 6,000 at 7:30 a. m., 41,000 at 8 a. m., 30,000 at 8:15 a. m., 40,000 at 8:30 a. m., 18,000 at 8:45 a. m., 38,000 at 9 a. m., 23,000 at 9:15 a. m., 10,000 at 9:30 a. m., and 29,000 at all other hours.

The Interior Department is the only one affected by the change that will now open at 8 a. m.

Offices opening at 8:15 a. m. will include all divisions of the Agriculture Department except the Farm Credit Administration, which will open at 9 a. m.; all other divisions of the War Department, and two sections of the Treasury Department's Bureau of Internal Revenue—the commissioner and miscellaneous unit and the miscellaneous tax unit.

No office which has not been doing so until now will open at 8:30 a. m. or 9 a. m.

These Due at 8:45

The following offices had their opening hour changed to 8:45 a. m.: The Justice Department, the Civil Service Commission, the Employes' Compensation, the Federal Housing Administration, the General Accounting Office and the Railroad Retirement Board.

The following officers had their opening hour changed to 9:15 a. m.: The Office for Emergency Management, the Board of Tax Appeals, the Federal Communications Commission, the Home Owners Loan Corporation, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, the Federal Power Commission, the Federal Security Agency, the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Maritime Commission, the National Labor Relations Board, the Panama Canal, the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Tariff Commission.

Hundreds Attend Annual K. of C. Memorial Mass

Chaplains of the various councils assisted in the services, at which the Rev. Wilfred Parsons, S. J., former editor of America, preached the sermon.

Following the mass, the knights walked to the Mayflower Hotel nearby for their annual communion breakfast, where Representative James H. Shanley (Democrat), of Connecticut, delivered the principal address. The District of Columbia Chapter sponsored the two events.

3 Soldiers Held As Robbers Of D. C. Hosts

Three soldiers from Fort Belvoir, Va., were held by Metropolitan Police on charges of grand larceny and robbery last night following the complaint of a Washington man that they had stolen $147 worth of property and money Saturday night.

Apprehended by Fairfax County police early yesterday, when local authorities broadcast a description, were Allen Peter Liberty, 22, Eugene Charles Herrick, 22, and Donald Everett Magill, 26. The complainant is Laurence R. Matthews, of 1125 Twelfth Street Northwest, a clerk in the Department of Agriculture.

Matthews told police yesterday, they said, that a friend who was visiting him, John Schaffner, of Bellfield, Va., met the three soldiers on Ninth Street Northwest and invited them to his apartment. Upon arrival there, he said, they overpowered him and Schaffner and stole $141 worth of household and personal furnishings and $6 in change.

The three suspects were returned here from Fairfax early yesterday and taken to the Second Precinct. They will be arraigned in Police Court at 10 a. m. today.

In other crimes reported in the District over the weekend, two gas stations, two grocery stores and a drug store were held up and robbed, and an attempt was made to open the safe of another grocery.

Roy C. Browning, of 746 Third Street Northwest, an attendant at the Carolina Service Station, Massachusetts Avenue and Third Street Northwest, reported to police yesterday that a white man about 28 years old confronted him with a revolver about 5 a. m. Sunday and robbed him of $25.

In another robbery, which Capt. Ira Keck, of the Detective Bureau, said was committed by the same man, Hyman N. Schdofsky, of 1203 West Virginia Avenue Northeast, was held up and robbed of $25 in a gas station at 1369 New York Avenue Northeast, where he is the night manager.

Two colored men, each armed with a revolver, held up a grocery store at 1418 Twelfth Street Northwest, and stole $112 from Rachmut Kuzmisky, the manager, he reported.

Another colored man, who entered a grocery store at 21 M Street Southwest asking for a loaf of bread, pulled a gun from his pocket and stole between $40 and $50 from James Jaffe, the proprietor, shortly before midnight Saturday, the latter said.

Carroll Gillman, of South Cheverly, Md., notified police yesterday that some time between Saturday night and Sunday morning an attempt was made to force open the safe at a Safeway Grocery Store, 4801 Georgia Avenue Northwest, where he is the manager. Entrance into the story was effected by breaking a hole through a plaster wall from the basement.

The dial of the safe had been knocked off, Gillman said, and an attempt to drill through a second door had been made. The safe held $551.

Va. Population Near D. C. Set At 103,662

The population of that part of Virginia in the Washington metropolitan area, totals 103,662, according to statistics of the Virginia Chamber of Commerce released yesterday. The rise of 74.4 per cent there, in the past decade, is far greater than anywhere else in the State.

The 74.4 per cent population growth for this section of the Old Dominion, embracing parts of Arlington and Fairfax Counties and the City of Alexandria, compares with a 36.2 per cent increase for the District of Columbia, the chamber pointed out.

Unincorporated areas in the nearby Virginia section nearly doubled in population with an increase of 99.7 per cent. This compares with a population rise of 40.9 per cent in Alexandria.

The report stated that the principal source of population growth in Virginia as a whole was in the four metropolitan districts lying wholly or partially within the State.

Populations given for the other three metropolitan areas and their rates of increase in the past 10 years follow: Norfolk-Portsmouth-Newport News, 323,326, 16 per cent; Richmond, 245,674, 11.4 per cent; Roanoke, 110,593, 7.2 per cent.

Library Cut Is Opposed By Trustees

$100,000 Already Spent on New Central Building, Atwood Points Out

The possibility that more than $1,000,000 already spent in preliminary plans for a new central public library building might be wasted should Congress divert construction funds to pay for new public school buildings, stirred comments from civic leaders yesterday.

Albert Atwood, chairman of the building committee of the public library's board of trustees, pointed out that this sum had already been expended and preliminary studies had been made by District engineers on the proposed site in the 400 block of Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest.

The threat of postponement of the new library was brought to the public's attention by Miss Clara Herbert, librarian of the Public Library. It is one of four economy measures suggested by the Commissioners to defray costs of new public school buildings necessitated by Washington's growing national defense population.

"The Board of Library Trustees fully appreciates the need of the District for new schools and school equipment, but it earnestly hopes that the Commissioners and Congress can provide the needed funds without postponing construction of the new central public library," she said.

"The present central library was erected in 1902 to serve a population of less than 300,000. Since that time the population has more than doubled."

Atwood declared that library facilities are essential to meet increased demands by the public schools. More branches should not be built until adequate administrative headquarters are set up in a new central building, he said.

"Anyone going into the public schools division of the library will be amazed by the amount of activity going on," he said. "Books are being sent out to classrooms throughout the city all day long. It is a feature of the library with which the public is not well acquainted."

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, expressed the hope that neither library nor public school, appropriations would be cut.

"Schools are desperately needed in many sections of the District which are outgrowing the present facilities because of large numbers of defense workers moving in," she said. "In all these sections library facilities as well as schools are needed."

Harry Stuhl, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, pointed out that the federation and most of its member associations have gone on record numerous times in favor of increased District library facilities.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

We Stick Our Chin Out After Snowfall and a Play

'Watch on the Rhine' Should Watch Its Step; That Big Circus Pauses Here on Wednesday; This, That and the Other About the Theater

SO WE WENT TO BALTIMORE on Saturday to see Herman Shumlin's production of Lillian Hellman's new play of "Watch on the Rhine" and encountered a considerable disappointment.

BELL

"Watch on the Rhine" is a play which seems, to these sullen senses, to mark a slight recession from Miss Hellman's habit of taut and tense playwriting, as exemplified in her "The Children's Hour" and "The Little Foxes." It does, to be sure, so closely pursue the current trend of American sympathy and thought as to insure itself a place among the season's moderate hits—perhaps it will be what is customarily referred to as a "smash"—but it nevertheless seems to me that it must place its main reliance in a third act that executes an enormous amount of salvage work on the two that have gone before.

Miss Hellman's salute to the perniciousness of totalitarianism falls into the same general category of plays as Robert E. Sherwood's admirable "There Shall Be No Night" and Elmer Rice's comparably cogent "Flight to the West." It drops, I should say, considerably nearer the latter than the former. It would have to be pretty good to achieve even that. In pointing her story, Miss Hellman lays herself liable to charges of being "spotty." Some of her characters are drawn with minute accuracy. Others lack the sharp definition they deserve. Her juveniles impressed this bachelor consciousness as three minors of such precociousness as to be almost continuously fantastic and only occasionally convincing. Perhaps the trials, tribulations and tortures of war have that effect upon children. We wouldn't know about that—as yet. But even if they do, there seems to be no valid reason why the oldest son of the Mullers should speak continuously in almost Shakespearean blank verse.

At any rate, the trek to Ford's Theater on Saturday possessed one quality of amelioration. It reconciled us, in part, to the fact that, owing to the youngsters in its cast, "Watch on the Rhine" cannot be presented in Washington without violating the terms of an obnoxious and obsolete District Child Labor Law.

There was another item on the credit side of the ledger, too. "Watch on the Rhine" reaffirmed a personal notion of long standing that Paul Lukas and Mady Christians are two players of superlative skill. Both do tremendously well by their roles in "Watch on the Rhine." So does Lucille Watson, as the grandmother, except that her part is so subordinated to a continuous flow of comedy that when her serious moments arrive they are not taken seriously. George Coulouris, another fine actor, finds himself in the plight of an artist called upon to lend color to a role from which the author mysteriously has omitted most of the evasive rainbow hues of the spectrum. Our Mr. Richard Livingston Coe agreed with this fallible reporter that "Watch on the Rhine" falls something short of the established Hellman standard. Lady Bountiful, who drove us over in her new, super-de luxe, fluid drive juggernaut, liked it. We shall see what bobs up in the press when the play gets to Broadway. My face, no doubt, will be a shade or two redder than usual—which will be plenty red!

Melvin D. Hildreth, Washington barrister and infallible encyclopedia of the "big tops," takes the trouble to tell me that Wednesday, April 2, will be the day so many have been awaiting. It is then that the Ringling Brothers-Barnum and Bailey Circus will hesitate long enough on a Washington siding to feed its stock and catch its breath en route from Sarasota, Fla., to Madison Square Garden, New York.

The astute and informed Mr. Hildreth, our first reliance in cases like this, passes along the word that the "Greatest Show on Earth" this year will at least approximate that extravagant descriptive. The menagerie tent, for example, will be of unbelievable proportions and without poles. Its treatment will be atmospheric and without cages. Instead of the barred wagons, each exotic animal will appear to be occupying his natural habitat. Next to that will come the giraffes on an elevated stage—and why anybody should think he has to "elevate" a giraffe I shall never comprehend—and then will come the gorilla tent, 122 feet long and also poleless. Then the horse fair. And after that the main tent, or "big top." It all sounds alarmingly alluring for Twenty-first and C Streets Northeast, once the business gets here for public exhibition, after Madison Square Garden, where it opens on April 7. Anyhow, there it will be for four or five hours on Wednesday, not set up but still slyly seductive with all of the most advanced notions of showmanship its sponsors have been able to dream up out of their more imaginative hours with the canvas Muses.

To allay your persistent palpitation, the February Box-Office Champions, as reported from actual audits of the key-city ticket wickets—speaking in syllables of celluloid, of course—were "Back Street," "Gone With the Wind," "High Sierra," "The Philadelphia Story," "This Thing Called Love," "Virginia" and "Western Union." If you do not entirely agree with the mass public's indication of favor, please do not bother this department with it. We don't either.

Last-Word-to-the-Weatherman Note

Thanks again. In Baltimore Saturday, it really snowed enough to stay on the ground, the windshield and the lenses of your glasses. Ugh!

CAROL HUGHES AND EDMOND O'BRIEN

in some sort of scene or other from Harold Lloyd's RKO-Radio production of "A Girl, a Guy and a Gob," coming next to the screen at the Earle Theater. Lucille Ball and George Murphy are the costars of this latest manifestation of the Lloyd penchant for cyclonic comedy

Leonard Lyons:

New York, March 30.

LABOR DEPT.: Col. William J. Donovan, who just returned from England, discussed some phases of his trip with a group of friends . . . "Frankly," one of them asked, "what has been the effect of the raids upon Coventry, Birmingham and the other industrial cities of England? What do you reckon has been the production loss?" . . . "I'd say that the Nazi bombings caused a loss in production of from 12 to 15 per cent," replied Col. Donovan, "—which isn't any more than we're suffering now in this country through strikes."

LYONS

SOCIAL NOTES: Theodore S. Kenyon, president of the New York Patent Bar Association, spoke at a public meeting and then showed the list of speakers to his young daughter . . . The list included Edna Ferber, Edward G. Robinson, John Kieran, F. P. A., Mayor LaGuardia, John L. Lewis and Herbert Bayard Swope . . . "Dad," the girl told Kenyon, "the only one on this list I never heard of before—is you."

POLITICS DEPARTMENT: Quentin Reynolds lunched with Wendell Willkie this week. Reynolds asked Willkie for an autographed picture, and Willkie asked Reynolds to autograph his book, "The Wounded Don't Cry." Reynolds, ever a Democrat but also an admirer of his host, wrote in his book: "To the Man Who Was Good Enough to Fight the Champ" . . . Willkie then asked Reynolds, who is returning to London whether he would return to the top-floor London flat where he lived last year. "What about the bomb shelter there?" Willkie queried . . . "I'll have the autographed pictures of the four toughest guys in the world, hanging above me," said Reynolds, "—the President's, Churchill's, LaGuardia's and yours—and that's shelter enough for me."

ILLUSTRATED SECTION: Eliot Elisofon, Life's Photographer, was assigned to take a picture of a young lady wearing a spring frock, in front of the Rockefeller apartments on West Fifty-fourth Street . . . The cameraman had everything set, but then decided that the picture would not be complete . . . He saw a tall man walking down Fifty-fourth Street with a black Scottie on leach . . . "May we borrow this dog for a picture?" Elisofon asked . . . "Of course," the man agreed . . . The Scottie was placed next to the model, and the picture was taken . . . "Now I'd like a picture with the dog standing on its hind legs," said the cameraman. "Can he do it?" . . . The man ordered: "Up," and the Scottie arose . . . "Thanks," said Elisofon, "and if you'll tell me the dog's name I'll give it a credit line" . . . "The dog?" said the man. "How about using my name?" . . . "All right, what's your name?" asked the cameraman. The man replied: "Clifton Webb."

COOKING DEPT.: "Bubbles" Schinasi was one of a group of cafe socialites who attended a party at the Shanty, on East Fifty-third. Miss Schinasi was asked whether she would cook her own food, as the others were doing . . . "I'll cook," she stated, "only for a newspicture" . . . And so Bubbles donned an apron and posed—while preparing a hamburger. "How about removing that big ring?" some one suggested . . . "Oh, no," she explained, fingering the huge stone, "I always need that—to measure the size of the hamburger."

LOCAL NEWS: Naval officials insist that the British warship which is coming here for repairs is the "Illustrious" . . . Virgil Reed is being boomed for the job of director of the United States Bureau of Census . . . The third trio of replacements, in the "Life With Father" family, will go into the show this weekend. Larry Robinson, who was the youngest one in the original company, is growing so fast that he hopes to return to the cast next year, in an older-brother role . . . Don Francisco has formulated a new radio plan for Nelson Rockefeller's Pan-American department . . . The theater authority has cleared 123 benefits for Greek relief this week—a new record. More than $1,000,000 dollars is expected to be raised.

CRIME DEPT.: When Gov. James of Pennsylvania was faced with a request to call out the militia, in the strike flare-up in Bethlehem and Johnstown, a reporter remembered the time when James' predecessor, George Earle, faced a similar situation, during the Little Steel strike in Johnstown, a few years ago . . . The then Gov. Earle phoned his Attorney General at midnight and asked: "Has Eugene Grace done anything for which I can put him in jail?"

THEATER DEPT.: Frank M. Thomas, the actor, is the father of Frankie Thomas, the juvenile who has one of the leads in the forthcoming show, "Your Loving Son" . . . Thomas dined at the Cliehy where he greeted a friend who had seen an out-of-town performance of that show. The friend congratulated the boy's father, and said: "Frankie's a chip off the old block" . . . "The actor-son of an actor-father is not referred to as a chip off the old block," the proud Thomas corrected, "but rather as a chip on the old shoulder."

MOVIES: Gregory Ratoff returned to his hotel and telephoned Western Union to send a wire to Hollywood. "I have a saanseshional mass-etch," Ratoff began. "It's gukink to," and he furnished the name, street number, "Hahlye-voot, Kelifornya." He then dictated the message, concluding with: "Dees is warry important and h'urjant. Ettant to hee right evay" . . . The operator repeated the message. "Sign eet," Ratoff finally told her, "Gregory Ratoff" . . . The Western Union operator replied: "I thought so."

Home Front Takes Over At Trans-Lux

Home problems for a change dominate the comprehensive news section of the current program at the Trans-Lux Theater; problems of Labor and Industry Management for a united effort of national defense. Strikes of Allis Chalmers, International Harvester, Bethlehem Steel and others are brought under the spotlight, and Clarence Dykstra states in no uncertain terms the aims of the mediation board.

There are no battle scenes in this week's show, but there is plenty of getting ready; high speed production of machine guns at the General Motors plant, while production of bombers and flying fortresses reaches mass proportion. There are interesting pictures of Navy bombers being tested in California and Army planes in review at Randolph, as Gen. Pershing looks on, and in contrast, in New Jersey, pigeons are being trained for war work.

Lord Halifax, in New York before the Pilgrim Society says: "Invasion won't succeed!" James Stewart is in the Army, and tons of propaganda handouts are burned in San Francisco, as Communist Leader Earl Browder goes to jail. Willkie is acclaimed in Canada, while Brazil looks to the improvement of her Navy.

The March of Time steps forth with "Uncle Sam, Non-Belligerent." "The New York Parade" is a fine pictorial story of the great metropolis, and the cartoon of the week is the latest M. G. M., funny "Mrs. Ladybug."

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, March 30 (INS).—If you want to know one of the ways stars are born in Hollywood, this tale may interest you. I carried a story about a Don King—a Fairfax High School lad who worked in a gas station where agents, movie stars, producers and directors buy gasoline every day. Tom Kelley, the photographer, saw the boy and thought he was such a photogenic type he took his picture.

LOUELLA PARSONS

After the item appeared young Mr. King had the studios bidding for him. Now he has signed with David Selznick on a long-term contract. David tells me he expects to groom the boy and sees in him a potential star.

I have a hunch that Robert Montgomery's fans will be glad that he has shelved his favorite characterization — a psychopathic, such as he played in "Night Must Fall" and "Rage in Heaven," for a lighter role. He has been loaned to Columbia for "Heaven Can Wait," a story about a saxophone-playing pugilist who passes himself off as an industrial tycoon.

Private Jimmy Stewart may be interested in hearing that his new girl friend, Ruth Hussey, whom he dated for the first time the night before he went into the Army, will be writing him from her dressing room on the Columbia lot. Ruth has been borrowed from M.-G.-M. for the Rita Hayworth role in "Our Wife," John Stahl's picture, and it is the first time she has been off the home lot since she signed her contract.

Chatter in Hollywood: When Betty Grable and Alice Faye played in "Tin Pan Alley" they were publicised as having a big feud. I don't think there was ever the slightest battle between the two girls, but it made good copy. But Betty made up her mind it wasn't going to happen when Carole Landis played with her in "Miami," so she had a huge sign painted, saying "no, we are not feuding" and now it stands between their two dressing rooms where all who run may read.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Frances Farmer's heart beat is one Harold Clurman; looks more and more as if Wally Beery and his former wife are going to kiss and make up. He and Rita and Carol Ann were dining together and certainly looked like a family group; Simone Simon, back in town, has taken up with Raymond Hakim where they left off before she went East; Mrs. Veronica Nagle, mother of Anne, marries Lieut. Comdr. Lewis in June. He is second in command at the San Diego Naval base.

Gloria Graybar, pretty little model, and Conrad Nagel, a House of Murphy twosome; Douglas Fairbanks, jr., left today for Portland, Oreg., to deliver a speech at the Jackson Day dinner. He returns here briefly before going East on another speech-making expedition; Alan Curtis and Ilona Massey had their wedding reception on Thursday, the day after their wedding and left immediately for a honeymoon in Catalina; Barbara Allen (Vera Vague to you) inviting her friends to an old-fashioned ice cream social.

Edmund Lowe and Gail Patrick never missing a dance at Ciro's; the Robert Taylors also spending cook's night out there; Gracie Allen and George Burns returned today after their two months in New York; Willis Hunt, jr. and Martha O'Driscoll, who parted forever, have forgotten it all and are doing the night spots together; happy birthday to Mrs. Selma Henie, mother of Sonja. When she awakens tomorrow morning she is going to find matched emeralds set in earrings and a ring which Sonja had made for her weeks ago.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, March 30.

Albert Morin, a professional ribber who's been engaged to upset many swank gatherings here, stayed in Hollywood and played bits.

HOPPER

When "Blood and Sand" was in preparation, he decided to rib himself into the picture. Albert was born in Turkey, speaks eight languages. So he grew sideburns, registered at a local hotel under the name of Francisco Cerrantez, and through a friend word was sent to Director Mamoulian that a famous Spanish bullfighter was visiting here. A la Hollywood tradition, three gentlemen called upon "Francisco Cerrantez" and with the help of an interpreter, engaged him for a bullfighter in "Blood and Sand," whereupon he was requested to join the Screen Actors' Guild.

Being already a member under his real name of Albert Morin, he went to the casting office at Twentieth Century and told his secret. They enjoyed the rib so much that now, in broken English, he speaks his lines in "Blood and Sand."

While I was visiting "A Woman's Face" set, Director George Cukor came over and introduced me to that grand man of the screen, William Farnum. It was then I admitted that Farnum was responsible for my being in the picture business. He gave me my first role. Those two have become great pals, and George is on the lookout for a good part for Bill.

Cukor said to me, "You know, Hedda, we have fashions in actors just as you have fashions in hats. A certain personality becomes the vogue—everybody wants him. He could be doing four pictures at once. They exhaust his popularity in a couple of years, and then another guy gets a chance."

I think it's about time for the cycle to get around to William Farnum, don't you? . . . George is certainly the actors' friend. He gets the finest people for even the smal. parts and gives them a chance. On that set were Henry Kolker, Bob Warwick, Marjorie Main, Reggie Owen, Albert Basserman, Gilbert Emery, and Rex Evans.

Jack Barrymore has finally gone over the border, and I don't mean south of it. With screams of mirth from the audience, you hear the anguished gasp of his sponsor when "h-e-l-l" came over the air waves. I can think of few things funnier than Jack as the matrimonial mate of Marjorie "Tugboat Annie" Rambeau, and Son Vallee's imitation of Katie Hepburn is so good he should be in the next Disney.

Watched Ginger Rogers and George Murphy playing a slot machine on the set between scenes of "Tom, Dick and Harry." Incidentally, they and the rest of the cast are creating a problem for studio executives. Because of the law, police had to O. K. the machine on the set before the scenes could be shot.

Gayety

The Gayety Theater is offering as its star attraction this week none other than Hinda Wassau, local favorite and one of burlesque's outstanding stars.

Possessing a dynamic personality and a million-dollar smile, Hinda's popularity seems to grow with each succeeding visit. In the current revue, she offers a cycle of dance routines and musical specialities that rank among her best.

Comedy proves to be one of the predominating features of the attraction, with such droll chaps as Jack Diamond, Freddy Walker and another chap whose name we unfortunately were unable to obtain, on hand. Diamond offers several amusing "bits," while the "unknown" funster contributes much to the merriment with a fast line of patter and an excellent barytone voice.

The distaff portion of the show boasts such sirens as Gloria Dahl, Zara, Cleo Florenz and Ethel DeVeaux.

Most Working Washingtonians Oppose Defense Strikes

ARTHUR C. HOWER, Brakeman
"With the country the way it is now anybody ought to be willing to work for whatever he can get."

By Charles Mercer
Post Staff Writer

SHALL America allow strikes in its defense industries?

"Those machines got to turn."

"Strikers should think of the state of the country."

That's the sentiment of working Washingtonians—counter girl, market owner, cab driver, cafe manager, mechanic, brakeman—folks who work for a living.

"Prices are going up, and a man's got to have enough to live on."

That's the sentiment of other working Washingtonians, organized workers, union workers.

"The union needs the right to strike to exist," insist the union workers.

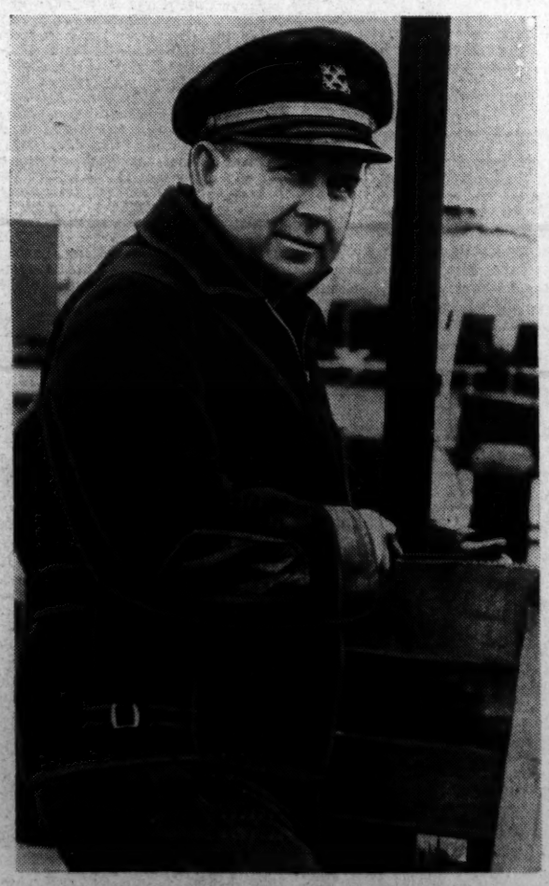
THE POST wished to learn what the American working man and woman think of the right of labor unions to march their members out on strike and leave shipyards, steel mills and factories silent. In its columns the Gallup Poll has stated that the great mass of the American people believes workers should not walk out in this emergency, and that the public largely blames union leaders for strikes in defense industries.

The Post set out to find what Washingtonians believe. It did not go into the lobbies of hotels or into business offices. It went to the waterfront, the freight yards, the tourist camp, a bar in southeast Washington, Union Station, the taxi stands. It wanted not a large number, but a wide variation of persons.

Every one of the nonunion folks who were questioned Saturday and yesterday as they went about their business said that no man had the right to walk out on his job now. All upheld the right of unions to exist and ten supported the strike as a legitimate weapon of a labor union—"except now." Eight persons believed that strikes have been instigated by union leaders; the others had no opinion on how they started.

CARL CHAPPELL, Market Owner
"Some outside party is getting his third up (rake-off)."

PETER SOMMER, Farmer
"The boys who are working get pretty good wages, don't they?"



A. P. COUGHLIN, Federal Worker
"It's the labor union leaders who are making 'em go out on strike"

DON DOE, 30, a skilled mechanic, was jacking up a boat on the dock of the Nash Marine Supplies Co. on the yacht basin.

"Anybody who has a chance to make a living the way those guys do, and then throws it up, ought to—well—it's all governed by the big guys," he growled.

AT Yacht Basin No. 1, A. P. Coughlin, 42, an employe of the Bureau of Prisons, was filing a saw preparatory to working aboard his boat, the "Amonita," in which he lives.

"It's the labor union leaders who are making 'em go out on strike," he said. "The boys ought to knuckle down and work. They ought at least to work and settle their troubles while they're working. What they're doing is no thing to be doing at a time like this."

AN engine shunted a line of cars into a siding of the Southwest freight yards of the Pennsylvania Railroad. Arthur C. Hower, 23, of 1475 Columbia Road Northwest, a freight brakeman, turned the switch.

He spat reflectively over the question.

"First of all, a guy ought to be able to get work in this country," he said. "Well, you can get work now. And with the country the way it is now anybody ought to be willing to work for whatever he can get."

He believes that labor union heads are pulling these strikes for what they can gain.

"Would you say there are racketeers at the heads of some labor unions?" he was asked.

Hower winked. "You hit the nail on the head, bud."

CARL CHAPPELL, 35, works 10 and 12 hours a day in his produce market at 1307 Maine Avenue Southwest. The strikes puzzle him.

"Some outside party is getting his third up," he said, suggesting a rakeoff. "The men ought to be satisfied with what they're getting. If they are real Americans they should be willing to work for less than they've been accustomed to in the past."

UP FROM Florida on Saturday came Mr. and Mrs. Peter Sommer. Sommer has been a farmer near Lexington, Ill., since 1893 when he came to this country from France. He and Mrs. Sommer are on the way back to their land in Illinois by trailer.

They were stopping at the tourist camp on Hains Point. The only way to see the country is to travel in a trailer, Sommers says.

"The boys who are working get pretty good wages, don't they?" he asked. "I met a fellow down in Florida who had been getting $1 an hour on a steelworks job before this trouble began. Now he's making $1.50. I think that's very good."

Mrs. Sommers said she agreed with her husband. "Prices haven't risen yet, have they?" she asked. "Milk has gone up a little in Florida, but I haven't noticed food is more expensive in other places."

NO ONE knows public opinion in Washington until he has talked with the taxi drivers. Their opinions and prejudices are often less their own than they are the composite views of all the people they have carried.

James J. Cook, 26, of 33 Randolph Place Northwest, says his opinions are his own. They agree, incidentally, with those of most of his fares on the strike situation, he added.

"Men have a right to go out on strike," he said. "But with national defense under way there should be a limit to the number of strikes they can pull. They're taking this whole thing too far, though. The boys at Bethlehem Steel went too far. It's a funny thing they can't find a way of coming to some agreement."

ANOTHER cab driver, Alvin M. Scates, 35, of 534 Fourteenth Street Northeast, seconded Cook's opinion.

"They have the right to go out on strike, all right. But I don't see why they can't put 'em off a little. These strikes have gone altogether too far."

He said he has formed no opinion on what is the chief cause of the epidemic of walkouts.

"I don't pay any attention to racketeers," he added.

Both drivers said the views of nearly all the other cab drivers they know and most of their passengers agree with their own.

"I THINK it's a bunch of Communists who are stirring everything up."

So said Mildred Lumsden, 19, of 1720 Bay Street Southeast. She is a counter girl at a Union Station soda fountain.

"The men who are working should think of the state of the country," she said. "I don't think most of them really realize what they're doing. And you can't tell me they're doing all this of their own accord."

Other girls behind the counter agreed with her.

"But it's hard to know everything about the situation," one declared. "They look wrong to me, but I wouldn't want to say so."

THE boys were gathered for a quiet Saturday afternoon beer at Jimmie's Cafe, 209 Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast. Thirty-year-old Orlando Giuliani, the manager, was at a spigot, and his helper, Leonard Gregori, 29, of 2109 Eighteenth Street Northwest, was washing dishes.

"What I want to say," Giuliani declared for the benefit of any who would listen, "what I want to say, is that strikes are all right, but in times like these men haven't the right to walk out."

A man who would not divulge his name wandered over to the bar from a booth.

MILDRED LUMSDEN, Counter Girl
"I think it's a bunch of Communists who are stirring everything up."

"It ain't the men's fault. It's all a plot." He smiled knowingly and drifted back to his booth.

Gregori paused at his job. "Plenty of work; ought to work; no strike," he said in broken English.

He was asked if he was an Italian.

Gregori drew himself up proudly.

"I'm an American."

TO the union men interviewed, the right to strike seemed to be a treasured possession, not to be sacrificed to defense needs or anything else.

"Certainly, they have the right to strike," answered Charles Brown, a 47-year-old chef, when asked if workers in defense industries should have the right to interrupt production.

"If they have good reasons, and if the time is right so they can win . . . then they should!" said Curtis G. Harry, a 22-year-old elevator operator at the Hamilton Hotel.

"I think so," said Samuel Flowers, a bald, 62-year-old fireman at the National Press Building. "The workers should have some say. Striking's the only way they'll ever get anything."

EACH man voluntarily translated the question into terms of his own situation, immediately after answering the initial query.

"A married man couldn't work at a hotel if it wasn't for the union," said Harry, the elevator operator, who lives at 1430 Chapin Street Northwest. The slender, blond youth said he had been a union member for two and a half years.

Fireman Flowers, a large man with broad features, sank down in the wooden armchair beside his boiler. He hooked his fingers in the straps of his striped overalls.

"Here we're trying to get a dollar or two more a week and the superintendent he won't give a bit. And sure, it means more for the stockholders this way. We were working here for $25 a week and they cut us two-fifty. That's when we began to organize the union. They raised us a dollar. Then another. But that don't mean a thing. We haven't been able to get anymore.

"I've been working here 14 years."

CHEF BROWN, a squat, hard-bitten man, had his hat pulled down low and his coat collar up when he was interviewed last night. He was picketing in front of a restaurant in 1400 block L Street Northwest, for his union, the Hotel and Restaurant Workers Alliance, an A. F. L. affiliate, which claims the cafe is nonunion.

"I don't know what I'd do if it wasn't for the union paying sick benefits," he said. "I ain't been working six months—stomach trouble."

But can she build a mound!

They call her soft fur nutria,
So snug-gle-y and warm;

'Sa shame to do her harm.

Giants Rout Anderson, Snap Nats' Streak, 7-4

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Miami, Fla., March 31.—There is a strong temptation for your correspondent to visualize the 1941 Nats as a first division team, honest. Quite a case can be built up for them, barring federal action which would throw the entire case out. We mean, of course, the possibility that Uncle Sam may take Buddy Lewis into his Army before the summer is out.

POVICH

That would be a horrible blow to the Nats—Lewis in an Army uniform. He has been promoted to clean-up hitter this year and is fitting the role nicely, and lucky it is for the Nats that Lewis is acting like a mop-up hitter, because there isn't another man in the batting order whose presence in the same spot would not be a confession of weakness. The Nats have only one hitter of Lewis' type, and that is Lewis himself.

But, barring the threat of the draft, the Nats have sort of been booming into high favor of late. Their seven-game winning streak in Florida may not be significant, but yet it may be. Certainly they are beating somebody. And they have been winning their ball games by a method they weren't supposed to own—power. Last year the Nats drove in fewer runs than any other club in the league. Down here, they look like anything but a punchless club.

Two developments within the past week are causing elation among the Nats' bosses. First, was the acquisition of Steve Sundra, from the Yankees. Granting that the Yanks are not parting with any stars for a mere $10,000, Sundra is nevertheless an improvement over any of the crop that was about to win the fourth starting job on the club by default. He comes to the Nats with a lifetime record of 21 wins and 11 defeats in the majors, and Bucky Harris is in a mood to kiss and embrace that kind of pitching.

Sun Shines Around First Base

The second development that is elating Harris is his first base situation. A week ago it was very drab indeed, and Harris was no little perturbed. George Archie was proving a disappointment, and Jimmy Vernon had not yet been tried. Harris knew of the talents of Jack Sanford, the third candidate, and saw nothing there to gloat about. But all of a sudden the first base situation began to clear itself up very nicely.

Vernon quickly demonstrated in his first chance at the position that he knows how to play the bag. He may be no less fancy as a fielder, in fact, than Archie who seemingly was depending on his defensive skill to hold on to the job. Vernon also began to sting the ball hard and altogether shapes up as the sort of fellow who could be assigned the job without compunction. But the job may not yet be his.

Because Archie apparently has just begun to hit. Within the past two weeks he has lashed out a pair of home run drives that were delights to behold, and to indicate otherwise that his .324 average on the Coast was no fluke. In any event it appears that the Nats can't lose at first base. For the first time since the ill-advised trade of Joe Kuhel to the White Sox four years ago, the club will have a first baseman.

Nats Have Real Center Fielder

And for the first time since 1936 it seems that the Nats will have a centerfielder who (1) can catch the ball and (2) throw it. Roger Cramer has brought to the Nats' outfield a welcome skill. In Washington's big park, particularly, is his long and accurate arm an asset. Runners who have been dashing from first to third and second to home in something like perfect freedom for several years will now be taking a risk, and not a few of them will be thrown out.

This new found power of the Nats may be only temporary, of course. In the Grapefruit League, the fences are short and fly balls drop behind them. But the Nats are no push-over club at bat, even when they are not driving in the runs. Buddy Lewis and Cecil Travis are a pair of the better hitters in the league, and Cramer is one of the three men who last year made more than 200 hits. There are signs, too, that from another direction the 1941 Nats will get more power.

George Case is a different sort of hitter this year, no kidding. He's swinging from his heels. It's under orders. Clark Griffith has told him to forget about a .300 average. He says he'll make all due allowances if Case gets down on the end of the bat this season, and swings with most of his power. The Nats' owner points out that Case is a strong lad who could hit for extra bases. Case is doing that this spring, although he's sacrificing an ability to beat out infield hits by taking a new power stance that slows his getaway from the plate.

There now, we've written an entire roseate column about the Washington ball club without mentioning Leonard, Hudson or Chase, even once. We didn't think it could be done.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, March 30.—What interests you today?

BASEBALL?—The sorry plight of Grover Alexander, broke and abed in a Bronx veterans hospital, could be remedied in a minute if the National League had an iota of conscience, Clark Griffith, doughty old cofounder of the American League, told us the other day. "Alex was as great an asset to the National League as stars like Walter Johnson, Babe Ruth, Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker were to our league," the owner of the Washington Senators declared. "And do you think we'd ever stand by and see any of our former stars in need? The National League makes all of organized baseball look bad, when it neglects men like Alexander. It could easily take care of him out of its league funds, without even referring his case to the Association of Professional Baseball Players . . . You know, the group that is supported by those all-star games. I guess the National League's just too busy, thinking up more fool ideas like synthetic doubleheaders and night baseball," the old warrior concluded, stomping off to his pinochle game.

CONSIDINE

GOLF?—During the recent Red Cross match in Nassau, big bluff Walter Hagen was about to chip on the green, from about 20 yards away, when he noticed that his royal highness was standing too far away from the pin to grab it in time, in case the ball started to go into the cup. Hagen looked up with that great squashed Babe Ruthish face and cheerfully said, "Get the pin, Eddie!"

The other members of the great foursome, Bobby Jones, Gene Sarazen and Tommy Armour, addressed the Duke of Windsor as "Sir" during the 2-day match. Hagen alternated "Eddie" with "Prince," and the duke, who seems to be a real nice guy, took to Hagen more than to the others. Windsor is a real, red hot golf fan.

The day the incomparable foursome arrived to play in the 36-hole 4-ball match the Duke sat down with them and rattled off the names and dates and the courses where Hagen, Jones, Sarazen and Armour won their British Opens and Amateurs. As Prince of Wales he had made the presentations of the cups upon all these occasions. At Nassau he held the pin and picked up the golf balls and did other little homely chores for all of them, during the Red Cross match, but Hagen was plainly his favorite.

We asked one of his equerries what Windsor thought about being called Eddie, and the man told us a story. He said that when it became known that the Duke would visit a certain Miami department store, during the Windsors' trip to this country, the sales girls began referring to him as Eddie in their gossip about the impending arrival.

Finally the Duke showed up, bent on the grim mission of buying a teapot, and the girl who waited on him automatically said, "Thanks, Eddie," when he handed her the money for the pot. Then she clapped her hand over her mouth and started to apologize. But the Duke stopped her with an arched eyebrow. "Why be sorry?" he said. "That's my name, isn't it?"

BOXING?—You may possibly think that Natie Brown contributed little to the boxing art in his 260-odd fights (and 83 appearances as a heavyweight mat burper) but you'll admit immediately after you read this that the man is a genuine patron of the terpsichore art.

Some time ago the great Paul Draper, who must combine the best that was in Nijinski and Jack Donaghue, arrived in Washington for an important appearance at the National Theater. The incomparable dancer had sprained his left ankle and the fact that he hadn't been able to use it had caused the muscles of his amazing legs to stiffen. Draper couldn't find a rubber he could trust and in semi-desperation he remembered that Washington was the home of Brown, who had fought 'em all. Draper is a first-rate sports fan, as well as a thorough soul, so he got Brown on the phone, managed to explain who he was, to the instantly suspicious fighter, and Natie finally sent over an old pug who is Washington's best rubber. Straightened Draper out just like that (snap!), Paul told us the other night in his dressing room, casting an appreciative beam at the burly cigar-smoking Brown. And the show went on.

Butz's Hobo Wins Feature At Fort Myer

By Anne Hagner

Making bums of those who scorned his jumping prowess because of his advanced years, Howard Butz's Hobo took a 6-foot fence with the greatest of ease yesterday to win the $200 invitation high-jumping contest of the Armed Services Horse Show at Fort Myer.

Margaret Cotter's Rocksie, who leaped the same height in the opening phase of the contest Saturday night, was the favored contender to take the championship crown, but after his 6-foot activities he had little respect for a mere 4½-foot fence and knocked it down on his first attempt.

Hobo, whose age has been roughly estimated at 24 or upward, placed second to Rocksie on the opening night of the show, so that yesterday's victory enabled him to pile up ten points to take the tri-color. Rocksie and Leon Arnold's Cateer, brilliantly ridden by young Mickey Magill, were tied with six points for the reserve award, so the committee gave the ribbon to Miss Cotter's mount because he had jumped higher.

Toast of the Post

Meanwhile, Butz's somewhat homely bay gelding was the toast of the Army post as he sauntered into the ring to get his prize. Although he has a long, unaccountable record of important victories behind him, yesterday's feat was the greatest height he has been called upon to jump since he has been in the hands of his current owner.

The Armed Services venture was the first show in which Hobo was ridden by 21-year-old Forman Erickson, University of Virginia student who had schooled the old horse only two or three times before mounting him at Fort Myer. The pair did not click well in the opening class of the event Saturday night, but succeeding attempts found them getting thoroughly accustomed to each other.

Hi-Ho Wins

Although Arnold's Cateer came in for the small end of the winnings, he and Magill worked harder than any combination on the entire fort as they entered (and usually won in) every open jumping class, with three or four jump-offs making further nerve-wracking moments.

Secondary feature on the card was the take-your-choice jumping, in which Lisbeth Stieg's Hi-Ho continued her excellent performances of Saturday night to take the blue over Mrs. Altemus Whitney's Bon Nuit, ridden by Roland Ridgeway.

In the final jump-off, Hi-Ho went first and lasted only until the third fence, which she knocked down. Miss Stieg gave up all hope of winning the class, but Bon Nuit surprised everybody concerned by slamming the second fence, giving Hi-Ho the blue.. Cateer and Fritz Kleemann's Comanche were third and fourth.

Although the hunters were almost ignored in the excitement of the 6-foot fencing, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Charles Lyman's Maui Girl and Mrs. Whitney's Cherry Bounce shared honors between them. Maui Girl took the open hunters' event and was second to Cherry Bounce in the ladies' working hunters.

The jumper scurry judged on the basis of time and faults, was 100

St. Paul Purchases Oral Hildebrand

St. Paul, March 30 (AP).—Oral Hildebrand, right-handed pitcher who won ten games and lost four with the New York Yankees in 1939, has been purchased by St. Paul, of the American Association, from the Yankee system, in a straight cash deal. In 1939 Hildebrand was one of the most effective pitchers on the American League champion's staff.

Starting the next season, Hildebrand won one and lost one. When the Yankees attempted to send him to Kansas City, Hildebrand refused to go, contending he had earned the right to stay in the majors. He didn't report to Kansas City and sat the season out.

What terms Hildebrand finally made with the Yankees or what amount St. Paul paid for him was not disclosed.

Hershey Pro Shoots 69 on Last Round To Pick Up 7 Strokes On Open Champion

By Bill Boni

Associated Press Sports Writer

Asheville, N. C., March 30.—In the most cockeyed finish in P. G. A. tournament history, Ben Hogan made up seven strokes on Lawson Little this afternoon after having lost nine shots to him in the morning, and won the $5,000 "Land of the Sky" Open Golf Tournament, with a 284 to the U. S. champion's 286.

It was Hogan's second straight triumph in this event, and by far the more testing. Though his winning 72-hole total was 11 shots higher than the tourney record he set a year ago, the Hershey, Pa., lightweight proved conclusively this time he doesn't have to be a front runner to win and that he can make an all-out gamble when he has to.

Hogan Holds 4-Stroke Lead

Hogan was leading Little and young Joe Kirkwood, jr., by four strokes starting this morning's third 18 holes. When it was over, he was five shots back of Little in second place, the hefty San Franciscan having shot a five-under-par 66, best single round of the tournament, to Ben's 75.

When Little went 1 over par on the first 5 holes of his final round, and Hogan was 2 under par for the same stretch, Little Ben looked to be back in the battle again. When he took an incredible 7 on the sixth hole (4 putts, two of which rolled right back from the pin), the door appeared to have been slammed in his face for good.

Shoots for the Moon

But that was the point where Hogan decided to stop being conservative and go for all or nothing. As a result he played the remaining 12 holes in 3 under par, while Little was going 4 over, and took down first money of $1,200 to widen his margin as No. 1 money winner of the year.

The payoff shot came on the eighteenth. Hogan had birdied No. 17, and coming off the green had asked what Little was in with. He was 2 under par at that point, and needed to get a par to win by 2 strokes.

His drive on that last hole was down the middle. Ben walloped his second shot over the back edge of the green, with a slight bank to chip over onto the carpet. He played it perfectly—just enough loft to clear the rise, just enough bite to slow the ball 3 feet from the cup on a green which had been lightning-fast all through the tournament.

Little's great 66, which contained four over-par holes, 7 birdies and an eagle 3, was no more startling than his finishing 76. The last time

Clayton Heafner, Dodson Added To Masters Golf

By the Associated Press

Asheville, N. C., March 30.—Big Clayton Heafner, of Linville, N. C., and little Leonard Dodson, of Kansas City, were named tonight to fill the two vacancies in the field for the Augusta Masters Golf Tournament, which starts at the Augusta National Golf Club next Thursday.

Of all the professionals not otherwise qualified to compete, Heafner and Dodson have had the best scoring records on the winter tour. The Carolina "Candy Kid" hasn't won a tournament this year, but is sixth among the money winners and fifth in the Vardon Trophy low-scoring competition.

Boston Beats Washington Eagles, 3 to 2

By the Associated Press

Boston, March 30.—The Boston Olympics spoiled the Amateur Hockey Association title hopes of the Washington Eagles today by inflicting a 3-2 "sudden death" period defeat on the Eastern Amateur Hockey League champions.

Junie Stubbs rammed home the clinching goal in the seventh minute of the second overtime period to drop the Eagles into a tie with Atlantic City in the Round Robin playoff to determine which team will meet the Allen Cup winners of Canada.

The Olympics, scoring their first home victory over the Washington club, had the advantage through most of the game, although they were forced to come from behind to tie the score late in the third period.

Eagles Take Lead

Al Baronowski, the burly Boston defense man, opened the scoring early in the first period with Ed Barry collecting an assist on the tally. The Olympics held this advantage until just after the halfway mark of the second frame when Washington equalized.

Al Thompson scored the tying counter, beating Goalie Vic Polich with a low shot into the corner of the net.

Washington went into the lead in the third period with Norm Burns and Frank Mailley combining to slip the rubber past Polich. The pair worked their way into the Boston net and Polich went down to turn aside Mailley's bid for a score. Burns

Bill Terry Turns Down Deal With Cubs and Dodgers

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., March 30.—Manager Bill Terry, of the New York Giants, revealed today that he had turned down a proposed three-cornered trade with the Chicago Cubs and Brooklyn Dodgers.

Larry MacPhail, president of the Dodgers, now is in California attempting to negotiate a deal for Second Baseman Billy Herman, of the Cubs. The proposition that was offered the Giants would have given them Second Baseman Pete Coscarart, of the Dodgers, and Hank Leiber, holdout outfielder of the Cubs. Chicago would have taken Catcher-Outfielder Hank Danning from the Giants and Brooklyn would have obtained Herman.

Terry said he was not trying to peddle Danning and that if any club expected to get him, it would have to bid high.

Red Wings Win Finals Berth In Ice Series

By the United Press

Chicago, March 30.—The Detroit Red Wings won their way to the final playoffs in the Stanley Cup hockey competition by defeating the Chicago Black Hawks, 2—1, in an overtime game. It was the Red Wings' second consecutive victory over the Hawks and entitles them to meet the winner of the Boston-Toronto playoff.

The winning goal came after 9:15 of the overtime sudden death" period. It was scored by Gus Giesebracht, with Syd Howe and Mud Bruneteau getting the assists. Giesebrecht picked the puck out of a tangle a few feet to the left of the Hawks' goal and slammed home the shot that settled the series.

After 1:25 of the second period Alex Motter scored for the Red Wings on a screen play while the Hawks had one man off the ice. Motter took a pass from Carl Liscombe and Howe to register the first goal.

About 4:02 the Hawks countered with the second goal of the period. Doug Bentley took a relay from Mush March and Cully Dahlstrom to drive a long shot through Goalie Johnny Mowers.

Several fine stops by Goalie Johnny Mowers and Sammy Lopresti kept the 15,519 fans in uproar until Giesebrecht counted the winning tally.

He Rolls to Run At Havre de Grace

Hot Springs, Ark., March 30 (AP).—He Rolls, winner of the $5,000 Arkansas Derby, is going to continue his campaign in Havre de Grace, Md., Racing Secretary Eugene Burk announced tonight.

Bury said the brown gelding from the stables of Mrs. V. P. Noyes would be shipped to the Maryland track tomorrow.

Jockeys Paul Keiper and Ben Cruickshank, involved in a spill during the running of the sixth renewal of the Derby yesterday, were released from a hospital today. They suffered only superficial injuries.

Hoya Icemen Beaten, 2-1, By All-Stars

Chet Adair's Collegian All-Stars treated 3,400 spectators to a rapid succession of thrills last night as they nosed out Georgetown University's ice hockey team in a fiercely fought game at Riverside Stadium, 2 to 1.

The All-Stars, comprised mainly of former college stars in the employ of the Government here, surprised the enthusiastic fans with their smooth skating and unexpected drive and looked the part of a formidable combination in victory.

The All-Stars stepped out in front in the first period when Dick Sherman, breaking away from a scrimmage, rammed home the puck unassisted at 9:07.

Tom Zink scored what proved to be the winning shot in the second period when he took a pass from Bob Lilly and buried the puck at 5:31.

The Hoyas scored their only goal at 14:27 of this period when Jack McQueeny scored, unassisted.

The game was ususually fast and cleanly played, not one penalty being called in the course of the evening.

Dick Sherman, former Williams College center and one of the standouts of the All-Stars, played the entire game despite the face that he was wearing ordinary eyeglasses.

Bill Jurges Back In Giants' Line-up, Shows Well Afield

Miami, Fla., March 30.—Shortstop Billy Jurges returned to the New York Giants' lineup today for the first time since he collapsed from a dizzy spell at Havana March 2 and looked like his old self as the Terrymen trimmed the Washington Senators, 7 to 4.

He played five innings and handled seven fielding chances with consummate skill before turning the job over to Mickey Witek, who slammed a triple with the bases loaded in the eighth for the margin of victory.

The game was the last for the Giants at the air training base. Tomorrow they will start a two-weeks tour with the Cleveland Indians.

Bloodworth's Errors Aid In Defeat

Young Hurler Found To Be 'Cousin' of Foes; Masterson Turns In Good Job

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

Miami, Fla., March 30.—That seven-game Washington winning streak came to a violent end today. Any self-respecting coroner would call it murder and suicide. The New York Giants murdered the pitching of big Arnold Anderson in the same eighth inning in which Jimmy Bloodworth contributed two suicidal plays to the Nats' defense.

The upshot of it all was a 7-to-4 victory for the Giants, who packed four runs into the eighth inning to break a 3-3 tie. Twelve hundred fans saw Anderson and Bloodworth surrender the ball game to the New York club after Walter Masterson had pitched six brilliant innings.

Anderson's eighth inning troubles began when Morrie Arnovich swatted a single to centerfield. Then Bloodworth put the big pitcher Jeep in trouble. On Demaree's attempted sacrifice bunt, the second baseman neglected to cover first and both runners were safe. Young's sacrifice moved them up, and Orengo was purposely passed to fill the bases. At this point, Johnny Witek lined a pitch into leftfield and when Johnny Welaj failed by inches to make a shoestring catch, the ball rolled to the fence and three runners scored.

Crashes Into Cramer

Bloodworth contributed another run to the Giants before the inning was over. He raced into short centerfield for Gabby Hartnett's high fly heedless of the fact that Cramer was standing beneath the ball. Bloodworth crashed into Cramer, knocked the ball out of the centerfielder's hands, and Witek scored from third on the play.

The Nats were held to nine hits by Cliff Melton and Paul Dean, the latter pitching the last two innings. Masterson, after a shaky start in which he allowed three runs in the first two innings, pitched scoreless ball in the next five, allowing only one hit from the second to the seventh inning, when Anderson got the job.

Roger Cramer and Buddy Lewis each collected a pair of the Nats' nine hits, but George Case delivered the feature Washington blow. It was a murderously tagged home run that cleared the leftfield wall by several yards.

Moore Opens With Single

Masterson had little success at the outset. Moore greeted him with a single on the first pitch, and Whitehead fllowed with a single to right. Moore scored from third on Demaree's infield out and a bit later Babe Young doubled to left to score Whitehead. In the second inning, the Giants upped their lead to 3-1, aided by a pair of walks and singles by Melton and Whitehead.

By easy stages the Nats tied the score by the fourth inning. Case's homer fetched them a third-inning run, and in the fourth, Lewis' single to center put the tying run in mo-

Miami, Fla., March 30.—Manager Bucky Harris today was displaying great interest in the announcement that Yankee Shortstop Phil Rizzuto was placed in Class A-3 in the Military draft . . . meaning that Rizzuto will scarcely be called up during the 1941 season . . . Harris' interest springs from the belief that the Yankees now may be prevailed upon to sell Frank Crosetti to Washington, which needs protection in the infield due to Buddy Lewis' vulnerability to the draft . . . The Boston Red Sox are also interested in Crosetti what with Joe Cronin slowing up, but the Yankees may be in no mood to strengthen as serious a rival as Boston . . . 2 Runs in Sixth Inning Give Reds 2 to 1 Victory Over Bosox

Tribe Wins, 7-2, Behind Bob Feller

Browns in Slugfest In Routing Bees, 18 to 2; Ted Lyons Shows Good Form

By the Associated Press

Havana, March 30.—A two-run rally by the Cincinnati Reds in the sixth broke up a hurling duel between Bucky Walters and Joe Dobson and gave the world champions a 2-1 victory over the Boston Red Sox and a cup for winning two of three in their Cuban series.

The Sox drew first blood when Jim Tabor crossed the plate on Frankie Pytlak's double in the fifth; but Billy Werber led the Reds' sixth inning siege with a single, advanced on Mike McCormick's sacrifice, and scored on Lonnie Frey's single. Frey got all the way to third on Frank McCormick's single and scored on Harry Craft's fly to left.

Catcher Ernie Lombardi, of the Reds, made his first appearance of the season, leaving the game at the end of the sixth with Walters. His much-discussed ankle caused him to limp slightly.

Feller in Form As Tribe Wins

Atlanta, March 30.—Bob Feller turned on the steam for seven innings to demonstrate midseason form today as the Indians made it two in a row over the Atlanta Crackers, 7 to 2.

Rapid Robert held the Southern Association batters to four hits and struck out ten as he became the first Indian hurler to go seven innings.

Jeff Heath started the Tribe's scoring in the second inning with a homer as the Indians hammered two Atlanta pitchers for 13 hits.

The Crackers' two runs came in the ninth after Bill Zuber had issued passes to fill the bases, whereupon Third Baseman Charlie Glock lined a single to drive in two runners.

Browns Crush Bees, 18-2, Get 24 Hits

San Antonio, Tex., March 30 (AP).—The St. Louis Browns wound up their exhibition schedule here today by drubbing the Boston Bees, 18 to 2, with 24 hits being good for a total of 44 bases.

The Brownies scored in all but the third inning off Bill Posedel, Jim Tobin and Al Piechota, three of Casey Stengel's pitching mainstays, and rapped out 11 hits for extra bases. Among them were home runs by Harold Clift, Johnny Berardino and George McQuinn.

Vern Kennedy and Bill Trotter held the Bees to seven hits.

The Browns' B team won a 7 to 6 victory over Minneapolis of the American Association in a game played at New Braunfels. Bob Muncrief and Maurice Newlin did the pitching.

Lyons Hurls Chisox To 8-to-3 Victory

San Diego, Calif., March 30 (AP).—The Chicago White Sox, led by 40-year-old Ted Lyons, snapped out of their losing ways today with an 8 to 3 decision over San Diego, of the Pacific Coast League.

Lyons gave up five hits and all of San Diego's runs, one a homer by Mel Mazzera, but the Sox solved two pitchers for 15 hits and an easy victory. It was their first triumph in the last five exhibition games.

Houston Takes 4-to-3 Game From Yankees

Houston, Tex., March 30 (AP).—The New York Yankees, who always have jeered the shenanigans of the Brooklyn Dodgers, are bowed in shame tonight.

They walked off the field with only two out in the ninth inning today and let a runner score from first base to give Houston a 4-to-3 victory. Only yesterday the Dodgers had beaten Houston, 11 to 0.

It was quite a mixup and nobody knew who won until the umpires held a press conference in the dressing room. What happened was this: With New York leading, 3-2, two out and a runner on second, Murtaugh grounded to Phil Rizzuto. His throw to Joe Gordon at first was wide and Gordon relayed the throw home to catch the runner sliding. The runner missed the plate and Catcher Bill Dickey missed the runner, but he put the ball in his pocket and started to the dugout with his teammates following. Meantime the runner not only tagged the plate, but Murtaugh came all the way around the bases and scored.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 30.—Lew Riggs hit his third home run in three days, and added a double and a single, to lead the Brooklyn Dodgers' second stringers to a 5-to-2 triumph over the Detroit Tigers today.

It was a double loss for the American League champions because Ned Harris, promising rookie outfielder, suffered a broken nose when hit by a batted ball in practice before the

And Here're the Rhymes Which Hit the Chimes!

A. J. Hendley Wins Haight Club Contest

J. F. Davis Takes Second Prize, With E. W. Trimmer Third

An added starter, a four-line verse that he mailed in after he had sent four others, carried off first prize for A. J. Hendley in the Walter Haght Club Contest which closed Friday night. Hendley, who lives at 1620 Fuller Street Northwest, will receive as his reward a tax-paid badge for the entire Bowie meeting as well as a ticket for the opening baseball game here.

Second prize went to J. F. Davis, of 3622 T Street Northwest, and his prize is either a badge to Bowie or a ticket to the opening game, according to which he chooses.

Third prize was taken by Edwin W. Trimmer, 113 C Street Northeast. He will get the badge or the ticket that is left after Davis makes his choice.

The judges simmered the entries down to ten without much trouble but it took an hour to separate the final five.

Here it is:

Listen, my horsemen, and you shall hear
What Haight and Bennings both make clear:
A dime for the Kiddies at 13th and V
Is a mutuel payoff on "Sweet Charity."

Davis also was a mutiple entrant. He sent in several and had two in the final ten judged. The effort that took down the second prize follows:

For one so round and jolly
'Tis sure a prank of fate
That this witty, humorous toper
Should bear the name of Haight.

Trimmer made a play on the shape that Haight is in. His lines were simple, but the judges ruled he said a mouthful. He sends in only two verses. He collects on this one:

Walter Haight is round and fat
Not built like any steeple,
He looks not like a man alone
But more like we the people.

Here's some of the verses that figured close in the final breakdown and were given honorable mention by the judges.

So Haight's a potato,
Now isn't that screwy,
But pass me the gravy,
And I'll see you at Bowie.
(Mrs. C. W. Magee)

Wife is writing lines that rhyme,
To send along with her little dime,
Hubby is fussing 'cause supper is late,
All on account of a guy named Haight.
(Mrs. Phil Regan)

I'll pay the freight for Walter Haight,
And send him down to Miami,
But such a rate for such a weight,
Better I should send for Miami.
(Mrs. B. M. Sampsell)

Walter Haight, may his size decrease,
Should be taken out and fried in grease.
He gives more stiffs, with his "sure-thing" hooey
But I could get even with that pass to Bowie.
(M. E. McCarthy)

Beat it, Walter, Haight to the bar.
(Ray Hughes)

D. C. May Get Big-Time Softball In the Summer

Big-time softball may come to this city with completion of the Washington Softball Stadium at New York Avenue and Bladensburg Road. Construction was begun last week.

Morris A. Bealle, general manager of the stadium, promises it will be finished by April 26, when the Columbia Saturday Afternoon League is opened there. Night softball under a lighting system of 42,000 watts will start May 5 under auspices of the Capital City League.

A meeting will be held at the Sport Center, Eighth and D Streets Northwest, tonight at 8 o'clock for the purpose of organizing the Columbia Afternoon and Capital City Leagues, and also the Sport Center Sunday League, which is scheduled to open April 27.

2 Baltimoreans Tie in Guerke Pin Tourney

Only two Washington bowlers made the cash list as Lee Seim, Baltimore soft drink bottler and Herman Ferri, New Haven, Conn., bowling alley operator, tied for first place in the second annual Winnie Guerke Sweepstakes concluded last night at Brookland Recreation Center.

The visiting pinmen posted totals of 1,398 for the ten games, rolled five games in an afternoon block at Lafayette and the final five games at Brookland. They each pocketed $175 as the field of 76 set a new record.

As the tournament is named after the defending champion, a playoff was necessary and the Baltimorean won the honor of being the namesake next year with a three-game total of 453 to 379 for Ferri, Seim also won a free entry next year.

Barnes Eight Pins Back

Ray Barnes, Baltimore, who won the Rich Stars and Stripes Sweepstakes Saturday night in Baltimore, finished eight pins back of first with 1,390 for $52.50. Winnie Guerke, the Baltimorean who won last year, made a bid for a second consecutive victory, but finished fourth with 1,387, worth $40.

First Washingtonian to appear in the prize list was Ray Watson, who won fifth place by a single pin over Baltimore's Meyer Jacobson. Watson totaled 667 and 716 for 1,383 and pocketed $30 to $25 for Jacobson.

Virginians Come Next

Virginians trailed in the seventh and eighth places, Lefty Goodson, Norfolk, with 1,356 and A. W. Berguson, Roanoke, one pin back. Ray Foirentino, Baltimore, captured ninth place with 1,345 while Astor Clarke, the Nation's top-ranking star, made the prize list with 1,330 for $12.50.

Billy Stalcup, Rosslyn,, and Louis Pantos, of this city, won second block consolation prizes, the former with a 720 set and Pantos with a 178 game. First block consolations went to Hop Caskey, Martinsburg, a 678 set and Staeve Witkowski, Middletown, Conn., a 185 game.

Prominent Washington bowlers trailed in the list of also-rans, including Tony Santini, 1,319; Perce Wolfe, 1,286; Ed Blakeney, 1,286; Dave Burrows, 1,172; Hokie Smith, 1,264; Ollie Pacini, 1,220; Red Megaw, 1,240; Harry Hilliard, 1,237; Ed Nash, 1,285, and Karl Gochenour, 1,225.

College Sports Take Over

Vermont and Harvard Nines Play Here Today

George Washington Meets Vermont at 2:30; Terps Host to Crimson at College Park

A pair of junior hurlers, Jack Redinger, of George Washington, and Artie Woodward, of Maryland, will attempt to pitch their respective teams back to the .500 mark today as college baseball hits the 2-game-a-day stage.

Coach Ev Morris' Colonials, trounced 10-1 by Ohio State in their Friday opener, meet Vermont on the East Ellipse at 2:30 with Redinger as the starting hurler.

Coach Burt Shipley's Terps, who lost, 7 to 1, Saturday to the strong Buckeyes, will meet an untested Harvard team at 3:45, with big Artie Woodward on the mound.

At the same time at College Park, Maryland's national championship lacrosse ten will open its season against Dartmouth on the field adjacent to the baseball diamond.

Net Team Play

Two tennis teams will see action. Davie Johnsen and his George Washington net men will be hosts to Cornell on the Columbia Country Club courts, while American University will take to the road, meeting the University of Richmond in the Virginia capital.

Redinger, who gained all-high honors at Roosevelt as a hurler and was also a regular on the C. W. mound staff last year, will attempt to make it two beatings in a row for the Vermont nine, which lost to Penn, 5 to 4, in ten innings on Saturday.

If Redinger, a husky youngster, fails to go the route, Morris will have Lee Lusby, a converted infielder and Eddie Amendola for possible mound duty. Jimmy Dowd will do the catching. Amendola pitched four innings against Ohio State in creditable fashion.

G. W. will present a slightly altered line-up against the visiting nine, coached by the former Red Sox third baseman, Larry Gardner. George Oertel will lead off followed by Zimmerman, second base; Gudmundson, right field; McNeil, first base; Sokol or Picco, left field; Fitzgerald, third base; Gilham, shortstop; Dowd, catcher, and Redinger pitcher.

The Colonials beat the Northeasterners, 3-0 last year.

Pressed for Hurlers

Shipley is sorely pressed for moundsmen with the Terps in five games this week and he hopes Woodward will go the route against the Crimson. The Rockville High graduate is slated for another starting role Friday, against Connecticut. Pop Wharton will be the other half of the battery combination.

Woodward, one of the most promising hurlers on the Terp staff, is a little wild but he came through with several good games last year and is expected to be better with seasoning.

Vermont and Harvard will not have the advantage of a full week's play as did Ohio State and the Colonials and Terps will be at least even money bets to break into the victory column.

George Washington steps right back into action tomorrow, against Harvard while Georgetown's promising nine opens against Dartmouth on the Hilltop. Dartmouth will move to College Park to meet the Terps on Wednesday.

Fields Wins; Measles Beat Miss Wilson

Stanley Fields won one and shared in two other titles without losing a set in the finals of the District Table Tennis Tournament last night at the Ice Palace.

The women's division bowed to the measles epidemic, however, as Carolyn Wilson, the Eastern champion and outstanding favorite, broke out with the little red dots yesteday morning and was forced to default to Jane Stauffer.

Fields, a commercial artist and host court table tennis instructor, brushed aside Lou Gorin in the men's singles finals, 21—9, 21—12 and 21—19.

Fields then took to the court with his wife, Virginia, and trounced Norman Dancy and Hannah Copperman, 21—10 21—17, in the mixed doubles. The men's doubles final was a repetition as Fields and Gorin defeated Jim Limerick and Bobby Bensinger, 21—15, 21—15 and 21—13.

The winners over the record field will receive all-expense trips to the national championships in New York, April 2, 3 and 4.

Reichard, Peters Gain Pin Place

St. Paul, March 30 (AP).—Missing a tie for first place by seven pins, Floyd Reichard and Steve Peters, of Chicago, rolled into second place in the doubles with 1,300 to highlight the minor events program at the forty-first annual American Bowling Congress tournament today.

Reichard, 35, is a Chicago policeman and Peters, 33, is manager of the Sheridan Recreation there.

Reichard hit 672 on games of 210, 237 and 225, while Peters came in with 628 on games of 185, 231 and 212. They had only two "open frames" in their series. Reichard drew a split in the third frame of his second game, while Peters was charged with an error in the same inning.

The doubles lead is held by Ned Day and Elmer Koch, of Milwaukee, with 1,307 rolled a week ago.

Two-Man Teams Back On Arena Mat Card

The two-man team of Len Macaluso, former Colgate All-American football star, and Fred (Legs) Grobmier, Iowa scissors king, has accepted the challenge of Eddie Newman and Chief White Feather for a special match on Thursday night's wrestling show at Turner's Arena.

Headliners will be Ernie Dusek, of the "Riot Squad," and Lou (Madman) Plummer, of Baltimore.

Leahy Eulogizes Knute Rockne At Irish Communion Breakfast

Coach Says Team Will Try to Follow in 'Rock's' Footsteps

By the Associated Press

South Bend, Ind., March 30.—Frank Leahy, the University of Notre Dame's new athletic director and football coach, said today in a eulogy of his forerunner and teacher, Knute Rockne:

"We have no hope of emulating Rockne or being another Rockne. But we can try to follow in his footsteps and in his tradition."

He spoke at a communion breakfast after a memorial mass for Coach Rockne, killed March 31, 1931, in an airliner crash near Cottonwood Falls, Kans.

"Notre Dame teams are known as the 'Fighting Irish,' but no fighting Irishman ever had more courage than Rockne," Leahy said. "His nickname, 'Rock,' told the story of his character best. He was a rock of character, goodness and courage."

The Notre Dame Club of the St. Joseph Valley and the Monogram Club arranged the memorial ceremonies. The Rev. Thomas J. Brennan said the mass in Dillon Chapel. Afterward a wreath was laid on

Western League Is Reorganized

Sioux City, Iowa, March 30 (AP).—The Western League, oldest in organized baseball, was reorganized here today and will include clubs from Denver, Colo.; Pueblo, Colo.; Norfolk, Nebr.; Cheyenne, Wyo.; Sioux Falls, S. Dak., and Sioux City, Iowa.

The league opening was set for May 15, and selected J. R. Carter, president of the league, from Norfolk, to draw up the schedule. Elwood Romney, business manager of the Denver club, was named vice president.

The Western will be a Class D league.

D.C. Fan Wants To Bet $10,000 On Galento

A local sportsman whose name for obvious reasons is withheld, yesterday hopped right up to the wheel of the Galento bandwagon by offering to wage $10,000 at 8-to-5 odds that Tony beats Buddy Baer April 8 at Uline Arena.

This spicy bit of information was wrung yesterday from Promoter Ray Alvis' propaganda division, which had prepared a complete dossier on the subject, incidentally.

Odds on the forthcoming Battle of Bums No. II last week were 8 to 5 and take your choice, but Galento money pouring into various local channels from Orange, N. J., Newark, Philadelphia and New York have established Two Ton Tony as the favorite, it was said.

Galento, who was stopped by Buddy's big brother, Madcap Maxie, in eight rounds, is even favored to knock out the younger Baer and win a second shot at Champion Joe Louis' heavyweight crown here this summer.

To Report Here Thursday

Two Ton Tony, who is training at Madame Beys, according to usually reliable reports, will report in Washington Thursday to workout in public in an effort to convince District fight fans he's serious about this comeback.

The District Boxing Commission, meanwhile, will meet today at 2 p. m. in an attempt to work out an arrangement whereby a referee who will suit all parties concerned can be obtained. Tony has a mad on at Arthur Donovan and has said he won't fight if Donovan is the third man, as had been arranged by Alvis and Mike Jacobs.

It's a foregone conclusion that the huge $700,000 ice arena will be a sellout a week from tomorrow night when Galento and Baer square off.

Raoul LeMat, manager of the Uline Arena, is having his troubles, however. The ventilating system ordered for the arena will not arrive in time for it to be installed before the fight, and the pall of smoke that hung over the ring in the Billy Conn-Dan Hassett battle probably will be dwarfed.

9,000 Fans Expected

A crowd of some 9,000 is expected to pay out $25,000 to see the Galento-Baer show, and it's probable that the ringsiders will get all the comforts of an outdoor arena—because of the 300 tons of clay which now cover the arena floor.

The clay was poured to provide a soft footing for the horses in the current rodeo show at Uline, and LeMat fears he will be unable to have it all removed in the two days between the close of the rodeo and the night of the fight. Special ramps, now being constructed under Jacobs' supervision in New York, will be shipped to Washington and placed at each end of the ringside section in order to enlarge the seating capacity and provide better vision.

Brewers Take Second Victory Over Bruins

The Brewers made it two out of three last night at Turner's Arena, playing the Washington Bruins, colored professional five, in the final game of their city championship series. The count stood 32 to 31 at the end of hostilities, and 800 fans were satisfied.

It was Nat Frankel who ran wild in the second half, making pot shots and pushing them through from under the basket with a nonchalance that startled himself. His 13 points were rivaled by 13 which Tarzan Cooper annexed while playing a superb game throughout.

It was the brilliant work of Tom Sealey and Cooper in the first half that tied the count at 15-all, each having 66 points to his credit. The Brews made three baskets in this half and scored 9 points by the foul route.

At the outset of the second half, Frankel and Dubilier put the Brewers on the long end of a 23-16 lead, which Cooper, Clarke and Briscoe immediately matched, and the Bruins ran the count up to 27-24. It was Frankel's three foul shots and a pot shot from the side which gave the Brewers their winning points, after the count was tied at 27-all. Bricktop Wright's one basket from midcourt gave the Bruins a 31-30 lead, but it was offset from the foul line as the game closed.

In the preliminary the Royals defeated the Aztecs 30-27.

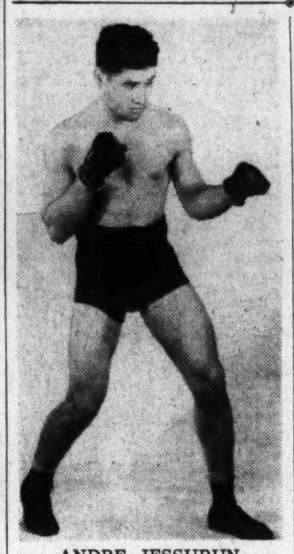
Jessurun, Cocoa Kid Fight at Arena Tonight

Third Match Between Pair Scheduled for 10 Rounds; Odds Are 6 to 5 and Choice

By Al Hailey

Andre Jessurun, the lad who helped brush Steve Belloise out of the middleweight fight picture, will attempt to do the same thing with the Cocoa Kid tonight at Turner's Arena in a 10-round match.

The battle shapes up as one of those science versus slugger type of affairs, and the odds last night were 6-to-5 and take your choice.



ANDRE JESSURUN, who'll seek to make it 2-out-3 over the Cocoa Kid tonight at Turner's Arena. The fight is scheduled for 10 rounds

Heaviest backing was being given the Puerto Rican welterweight, but Jessurun, a legitimate middleweight, had plenty of backers willing to give odds.

Jessurun, born in French Guinea 25 years ago, is three years younger than the rangy Puerto Rican colored fighter and will have a slight weight advantage. A veteran of some 170 battles in the professional ring, Jessurun attracted wide attention at the start of his career but had slipped into the background until his upset of Belloise in January. Belloise was being groomed by Mike Jacobs for ascendency to the middleweight throne.

Have Divided in Fights

Jessurun, who'll play the part of the slugger tonight, defeated Cocoa once and lost once to him. In their 1937 meeting in Baltimore Cocoa knocked out Jessurun in the eleventh round.

The Puerto Rican, who is said to have hit the down grade since losing a close decision here last summer to Georgie Abrams, brushed through a fast workout yesterday and predicted he would flatten Jessurun again tonight.

A victory over Jessurun would put Cocoa back in the spotlight again. Ranked among the first five welterweight contenders last month, Cocoa is not given honorable mention in the current N. B. A. ratings.

Jessurun, on the other hand, is ranked by Ring Magazine as the eighth best middleweight—ahead of Ernie Vigh and Steve Mamakos. Jessurun is possessed of a killing punch, and Cocoa will have to call on all his skill tonight to stay out of danger.

Big Drawing Card Here

One of the cleverest strategists in the business, Cocoa has a long left hand that stays almost constantly in the face of his opponents. His scientific style made him the biggest drawing card of the outdoor season last summer, when he drew $18,000 in three local appearances. He defeated Bill McDowell and Furr here before losing to Abrams.

Jessurun, campaigning then as a welterweight, lost a ten-round to Saverio Turiello here in 1937, his last appearance in Washington.

Getting away from the light brigades, Promoter Joe Turner and Matchmaker Gabe Menendez will stick to the heavier divisions in the preliminaries.

Larry Bochard, lanky 200-pounder, will fight Jabbo Kenner, local colored heavyweight, in the six-round semifinal. El Brookman, Washington's perennial welterweight, fights Caesar Ferror, of New York, in another six. Best fight on the undercard probably will be furnished by Carol Alexander, the clever little Alexandria lightweight who has shown much promise in winning seven straight professional matches. He meets Vir Cirici, of New York, in a six. The four-round curtain raiser at 8:30 p. m. brings out Billy Kekeris, Golden Gloves graduate, against Ken Stribling.

4 Champions Top Week's Fight Program

By the Associated Press

New York, March 30.—Four champions and two heavyweight title contenders go to the highlight this week's national boxing program.

Max Baer meets Lou Nova, of Oakland, Calif., at Madison Square Garden Friday night in a 12-round battle bringing together two of the leading heavyweight contenders for Joe Louis' crown. Nova stopped Baer in 11 rounds in 1939 when a bad cut inside of Baer's mouth caused the referee to intervene.

Champions Billy Conn, Ken Overlin, Fritzie Zivic and Petey Scalzo all fight in nontitle bouts. Conn still tuning up for his heavyweight title match with Louis, meets Gunnar Barlund, of Finland, in a 12-rounder at Chicago Friday.

Zivic, welterweight king from Pittsburgh, takes on Dick Demaray, of Bismarck, N. Dak., in a ten-rounder at Minneapolis the same evening.

Overlin, middleweight titleholder of New York and California, tangles with Harvey Massey, of New York, and Scalzo, of New York, N. B. A. featherweight champion, tackles Vern Bybee, of Ogden, Utah, at San Francisco, Calif. Both will be held tomorrow night, at ten rounds each.

Terp Lacrossemen Face Dartmouth

By the Associated Press

Still lacking the services of its regular coaches, the national collegiate champion University of Maryland lacrosse team has not yet been definitely chosen for the opening game of the season against the Dartmouth stickmen today, but it is probable that the starting lineup will include seven veterans and three sophomores.

Coaches Jack Faber and Al Heagy have been assisting with spring football drills.

Jim Forbes at goal, Bob Fetters at one of the points, and Milton Vanden Berg at one of the homes are the rookies slated for starting posts.

Bill Graham will play the other point, Fred Widener appears to have the best chance at first defense, and Jack Mueller, the heavy scoring midfielder, will be at the second defense.

Completion of the offense will come from among Lettermen Bill McGregor, center, and Jordan Sexton, Al Sleisinger, Jack Garrett and Chick Allen. Ramon Grelecki, another sophomore, may also see action.

The Dartmouth game, scheduled for 4 p. m., opens a ten-game schedule for the stickmen. Three of the games will be played this week, with Harvard coming to College Park on Thursday, and Loyola, of Baltimore, on Saturday.

Christmas Stable to Race Strong String at Bowie Meeting

Rough Pass, Others Vie For Purses

Prince Georges Oval Opens Tomorrow; First 8-Race Card; Hay Mutuel Chief

Headed by Rough Pass, winner of the Dixie Handicap last year at Pimlico, the 40-horse stable of the Christmas family of Upper Marlboro, will all be striving for purses during the Southern Maryland Agriculture Association's 11-day meeting, which ushers in the 1941 Eastern season tomorrow.

Rough Pass, 4-year-old brown son of By-Pass II and Ephyre, will be campaigned by Owner-Trainer J. Yancy Christmas. Horses owned by Yancy, his wife and his brother, B. Frank Christmas, won 38 races last year, finished second 26 times and was third upon 40 occasions, during which they earned $56,630.

In addition to the above members of the Christmas family, others to be represented next month are Miss Rhoda Christmas, Donaldson Christmas and Dick Christmas, all possessing keen horse sense.

Eighth on List

Yancy Christmas was eighth on Maryland's list of winning owners last year. Recently returned from California, Yancy says he has a string in training that should enable him to finish a few notches higher this year on the Maryland money winning list.

Bill Irvine, who as trainer of the Edward F. Whitney, Sylvester W. Labrot and J. W. Y. Martin strings, developed many topnotch horses, sent word from Pimlico that he was handling eight 2-year-olds for Leslie E. Keiffer, master of Inverness Farm and that several of the youngsters would be seen under silks during the meeting.

It is pleasing news to turf fans everywhere to know that Irvine is again in charge of a first-class stable. While with the late Edward F. Whitney and Sylvester W. Labrot, Irvine developed such good ones as Mainmast, Tred Avon and Joy Smoke. When he took over the Martin band, Irvine developed the speedy Con Amore, who with Mainmast, still is joint holder for the three-quarter mile track record at Pimlico.

Noyes on Hand

Victor P. Noyes, well-known Long Green Valley sportsman, is bringing in a well-balanced stable from Hot Springs, Ark. Noyes' horses are all fit as their recent victories at Oaklawn will attest.

J. Bwes Bond, who is handling the horses of Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Horkheimer among others, is well pleased with the condition of his charges. Bond has been here for several weeks and states he hasn't lost a single day on the track, this despite the appearance of severe snows earlier in the month.

Among the horsemen, who have been prepping their charges at the nearby Pimlico track, and who will be here before actual racing begins are: Len Carver, whose "ace" is the speedy John's Star; Mose Simon, Harry Neustetter, James V. Stewart, Bill Kennedy with nine of the Flamingo Farm's band; George Sprague with a public stable of five, Tommy Waller, Chuck Frost, Anthony Mazzeo and Dominick Venziano.

The daily double will be on each day's first and second races. Windows selling "double" tickets will close at 1:45 p. m., so that Manager Donald Hay can post the official "double payoff immediately after the first race is run. Post time throughout the meeting will be 2 p. m. This is due to eight races being programmed daily, one more than at previous spring sessions.

tion. He went to second on Travis' out, and scored on Bloodworth's single past third base.

At this point, Bloodworth got in his earliest bit of sabotage. He wandered too far off first base on Archie's foul pop to Young, and was doubled up before he could return to the bag.

Masterson was clever after the second inning. He was pouring his fast ball over the plate and also displaying a baffling curve. Moore's double was the only hit against him through the third, fourth, fifth and sixth innings. Meanwhile, however, Melton was keeping the Nats off base.

The Nats made a feeble sort of effort to tie the score in the ninth. They fell three runs short. Archie opened the inning with a hit to Orengo, and took second on an overthrow. Ferrell grounded out, and Paul Dean struck out Pinch-Hitter Sammy West. Case walked, however, and Cramer got Archie home with an infield single. The rally subsided on Welaj's grounder to Orengo, who touched third for the game-ending out.

Sun Egret and 6 Other Horses To Go on Block Today at Bowie

Winner of $85,200 Star of Group Offered as Bedwell and Hecht Split

The auction sale of horses owned jointly by Guy Bedwell and Henry Hecht will be conducted this morning, starting at 11 o'clock in the paddock at the Bowie race track. Humphrey Finney, who will take charge of the bidding, made that announcement last night despite the fact that a postponement of the sale had been advertised.

Seven horses, which raced under the colors of A. C. Compton and later as the "A. C. C. Stable," will be put on the block by the veteran Maryland trainer and the Baltimore business man.

Chief interest in the sale is expected to center around the bidding on Sun Egret, the 6-year-old stake horse. Although on the shelf at this time as far as racing is concerned, Sun Egret is recuperating from an operation for an abcess and it is said that he will be able to return to competition.

However, Sun Egret is likely to be eagerly sought as a stud prospect. He has been away from races since last August and was the winner of $85,200 during three years of campaigning. Among his stake victories was the Capitol Handicap twice, the Harford Handicap twice, the Rowe Memorial, Bowie Spring Handicap and Laurel Mile. In the Laurel, Sun Egret collected $7,125 for the winning end.

In all seven horses will be put on the block. Latour is a maiden but the other six have won a total of 90 races. Sun Egret won 24 races, Clingendaal 23, Ace Call 8, Drift Along 17, Transmitt 11 and Sun Altesse 7. Sun Egret, Drift Along and Clingendaal are the three stake winners in the group.

Although he has not won a stake race, Sun Altesse has piled up $8,500 in earnings. The son of Kantar and Her Grace is expected to produce some spirited bidding. He was purchased by Bedwell and Hecht out of the disposal sale of the horses of the late Ral Parr, for whom Bedwell also trained.

Although they have come to a parting of the ways, both Bedwell and Hecht will remain in racing. Bedwell has a large stable at Bowie for himself and others. Hecht has four 2-year-olds and will campaign them this year. His horses also are at Bowie. It has been reported that Harry Baker will be his new trainer.—HAIGHT.

Selections at Tropical

Dear Al:

It won't be long now. One day to Bowie and this will be the last pot shot of this column at Tropical Park. I'm glad the Florida season is over and so are a lot of other regulars. The horses have been running forward, backward and sideways and a crystal gazer has been much better than a figure man. I guess it is a case of sour grapes with me, but, as Jake says, 'It has been murder, just plain murder." Despite the fact that it is known as a long-shot track, Bowie has a high rating in winning favorites Last season 50 per cent of the public choices cracked down, which is a mighty good figure on a mile track. If the Prince Georges County oval can repeat that figure, the boys and girls who back the bangtails should do O. K. for themselves. I couldn't get in touch with Manager Farrell yesterday but can't be surprised if the 2-year-old race is moved back from its usual No. 1 position on the program as I predicted some time ago. I would like to see the juveniles taken off the daily double races. It was when older horses ran in both ends of the double that the track set the record for a daily double pool in Maryland last year. I would prefer to see one six-furlong race and another at a mile. The double will be on the first and second races with the double windows closing at 1:45 p. m., 15 minutes before the field is scheduled to break for the first event. This is the earliest spring post time Bowie has had and is necessary because the programs this year will be eight races instead of the usual seven. The track was in good shape yesterday despite the light rain and snow. Track Superintendent Dick Pending expects to have it fast for tomorrow's opening, provided that the sky does not elect to leak before the program begins. It can't be long now before I'll see you on the rail. BILL.

First race—KEEKEE appears to have found the spot that suits his purposes in the day's opener. I expect a winning effort. VIOLANTE promises to be a threat in this company. BEZIQUE may prove best of the others.

Second race—SUBURBAN appears good enough to turn back these maiden 3-year-olds. Breaks off the rail and should make the most of the position. BETTIE NUX has worked well and should be in the thick of the contention. CHOSEN TIME to take care of the show end.

Third race—HAPPY WINNER must carry 118 pounds for this but will have the hard-riding Ryan in the saddle and I'm going to string along. STARKEE likes this track and will be in the thick of contention. WISE DEAN may take a money position.

Fourth race—IMPERIAL JAYNA is a fair sort and should turn back this kind. All we need is the right ride. LATEPASS carries 118 pounds and draws Arcaro as the rider. The combination is dangerous. ETERNAL WAVE for the show.

Fifth race—REMARKABLE is as sharp as that smashing recent victory. Promises to come back with another fine effort and I'm going to be there. HIGHSCOPE and ESPINO GOLD are fit horses and will be factors in the closing stages.

Sixth race—ART OF WAR has plenty of speed but stops. May forget to put on the brakes and go on to win this heat. MERITORIOUS and JAN ONE figure close to the top one and will battle it out if he stops.

Seventh race—DULCIMER fits nicely in a field of this brand. Likes the route and conditions otherwise appear to point to a victory. PETEE GENE and ENDYMION for the place and show.

Eighth race—Perhaps I should give up on DISSEMBLER but this will be my last crack at this plater in Florida so I'm going back. This is the right spot, I do believe. GENEVA CROSS and ERIN'S SUN for the other money positions.

Best bet—REMARKABLE.

Rebels Turn Back Brooklyn Dodgers(3a1

Fort Worth, Tex., March 30 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers, who had rolled up 28 runs to 0 in two previous Texas exhibitions, were knocked down to their size today by the Dallas Rebels, 3 to 1.

Tex Carleton, a native son, held Dallas scoreless for five innings, Joe Medwick's home run giving him a lead to work on. But then Manager Leo Durocher sent in Jack Russell, the former Chicago Cub who was hired last week as a batting practice pitcher, and the Rebels tallied once in the sixth and twice in the eighth, the latter on a wild throw by Harry Lavagetto.

Los Angeles, March 30 (AP).—Charles Root 42-year-old pitcher, and Lou Novikoff, slugging rookie, played major roles today in the Chicago Cubs' 8-to-2 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Novikoff slammed a first-inning homer with Stan Hack on base, to give the Cubs a lead they never relinquished, but pulled a leg muscle and retired from the game. Root allowed the Bucs only three hits in six innings and increased the Cub margin with a second-inning home run.

Rookie Paul Erickson finished the mound job and yielded only two hits in the last four frames.

Eagle Owner Wants New Play-Off Series

Despite the fact that last Friday's 12-3 rout of River Vale was advertised as the final home game of the season, the ice hockey Eagles may come back for another series, if negotiations opened last night by Owner S. G. Leoffler, sr., are successful.

Leoffler is seeking to arrange a three-game play-off series between his Eastern Amateur League champions and the Atlantic City Sea Gulls for the United States Amateur Hockey Association championship.

The series ended in a deadlock involving the Eagles and the Gulls, and Leoffler wants to see it settled definitely. First game of the series would be played at Riverside Stadium Wednesday at 8:30 p. m., with the second in Atlantic City. If a third game should be necessary it would be played in Baltimore next Sunday night.

Van Lingle Mungo Hurls 4 Scoreless Innings in Macon

By the Associated Press

Macon, Ga., March 30.—Van Lingle Mungo today celebrated a battery reunion with Brooklyn Catcher Babe Phelps and pitched four scoreless innings as Montreal (International League) won a 4-0 exhibition victory over Durham (Piedmont League) before 1,000 fans here.

Mungo's first pitch was a single for Rookie Infielder Robert Ramazzotti, but that was all. After the first frame there wasn't a ball hit out of the infield.

Mungo struck out two men, walking two, and put zip into his overhand delivery for the first time in more than a year.

Phelps, who also is in good shape on the Brooklyn "farm" camp, said the big righthander was throwing "more naturally" than at any time since 1938.

Boston, March 30 (AP).—The pick of the nation's amateur boxers—146 in all and representing 26 States—gathered in Boston tonight for a three-day campaign for eight national titles in the A. A. U. championships at Boston Gardens.

The program opens tomorrow with two rings being used to whittle the huge field down to 64 survivors for the quarter finals in the first day. This series of bouts will be held Tuesday with the 32 survivors battling through the semi-final bouts on Wednesday.

Entrants, as usual, are well-seasoned campaigners including champions of the various sections of the country. All were chosen through the testing series of elimination required of amateur boxers seeking participation in the national tournament.

Missing from this year's entry list is the picturesque team from Hawaii, ordinarily a feature attraction of the annual carnival of fisticuffs.

Bruins Face Toronto Again

By the Associated Press

Boston, March 30.—A surly hand of Boston Bruins entrained today for Toronto, refusing to concede anything to a Maple Leaf team which holds a 3-to-2 edge over them in their best of seven playoff series for hockey's greatest prize—the Stanley Cup.

The Leafs have a physical edge due to injuries to Bill Cowley and Bobby Bauer of the Bruins and they hold a mental margin playing on their home ice. But the Bruins recall that they copped a decisive battle from the Leafs on Toronto ice only last Thursday to even the series.

"We got up off the floor once before in this series," summed up General Manager Art Ross as the team departed. "I think we can do it again. This team never has been known to quit and it won't quit Tuesday."

Colgate's Net In Year Totals $4,044,760

By the Associated Press

Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co., makers of soaps and toiletries, reported consolidated net profit for 1940 of $4,044,760, or $1.72 a common share. The figure excluded operations of or dividends from English and continental European subsidiaries.

On the same basis, net 1939 profit was $5,455,319, or $2.14 a common share.

In general comment to stockholders, E. H. Little, president, indicated the company was well stocked in essential raw materials and continued:

"During the period of the first World War, the price of glycerine (a soap manufacturing by-product which the company sells in considerable quantities) rose substantially because of the demand for this product in the manufacture of munitions.

"Present munitions manufacturing methods, however, do not require any such quantities of glycerine and no comparable rise in price is anticipated."

United Cigar-Whelan Stores

United Cigar-Whelan Stores Corp., tobacco and drug chain, reported net profit of $120,946 in 1940, the first year in which a profit had been realized since the concern was reorganized in 1937. Loss in 1939 was $235,378.

Wabash Railway

Wabash Railway Co. in its annual report revealed its gross income in 1940 rose to $46,567,217, an increase of $1,553,715 over the preceding year.

Revenues last year, less expenses, the report showed, left $4,741,041 to apply against interest on outstanding obligations. This was $2,335,899 less than requirements for interest.

Net loss, as previously reported was $2,335,899 in 1940, compared with loss of $3,542,184 in the previous year. The railroad is in receivership.

Southern Natural Gas Co.

Southern Natural Gas Co. reported 1940 net income of $2,052,773 after all charges including excess profits taxes, equal to $2.97 a common share, compared with $1,647,789, or $2.38 a share, in 1939. Sales in 1940 totaled $8,837,322, largest in the company's history and 21 per cent above 1939.

Life Savers Corporation

Life Savers Corporation earned net profit in 1940 of $1,016,876, equal to $2.90 a common share, compared with $1,024,927, or $2.92 a share, in 1939, Oscar T. Kappes, president, reported to stockholders today.

Kappes said sales of $4,809,497, up 12.2 per cent from 1939, were the largest in the company's 27-year history. Profits from operations, before taxes, also were the highest.

Police Sift Hit-Run Death of Md. Boy

Cumberland, Md., March 30 (AP).—State and city authorities continued today their investigation of the death of 12-year-old William Retallick, of Bowling Green, killed by an automobile Friday night near Roberts Place.

Police said they were told that young Retallick, walking on the right side of the road toward Cumberland with Robert Tabor, 12, also of Bowling Green, was thrown into a ditch by an automobile that failed to stop.

The Tabor boy ran to the nearby home of Frank P. Hines. He and R. F. King brought the Retallick boy to Memorial Hospital here, but he died en route. The left side of the boy's head was crushed.

Mrs. Walter L. Morton and Mrs. Pauline Bradley, of Cresaptown, who were driving in the opposite direction, said they were forced off the highway by the car that struck the youth. They said it was traveling too fast for them to note the license number.

Profitless Labor

By Roger W. Babson

The Florida Headache

Babson Park, Fla., March 30.

Today I am leaving Florida and do not expect to be back again until next January. As I am cleaning up my desk, I find three clippings which I have been saving to comment upon. Let me do so now.

A short time ago the following editorial appeared in a prominent Florida newspaper:

"There will not be much comfort for Florida growers in the Department of Agriculture's recent estimate of the nation's citrus crop.

"The Federal crop reporting board estimates an all-time record orange crop of 81,000,000 boxes this season; grapefruit production is put at 40,000,000 boxes, a total increase of about 10 per cent over last season. Florida orange production, including tangerines, is put at 28,000,000 boxes. That's about the same as last year. The estimate on grapefruit is a Florida headache. Federal experts forecast the Florida production at 21,000,000 boxes, compared with a 1939-1940 crop of 15,000,000 boxes."

In reply, a reader sends the paper a quotation from Robert Ingersoll: "There is something wrong with a government when those who produce all have nothing, while those who produce nothing have it all." As I have watched the growers of oranges and grapefruit sweat in their groves to pay interest and taxes and get almost nothing therefrom, I cannot help but be sympathetic with the farmers. What is wrong? It is not the law of supply and demand—it must be something else. Let us look at the record.

Whether the fruit growers get anything or not—the railroads get their dollar or more per box as freight, the packing houses get their regular fee, while the middlemen get their regular commissions. In fact, the more fruit there is, and the worse off the grower is, the more profits are made by these other people. After 20 winters in Florida, I have concluded that the problem will be rectified only through a pooling of the earnings of all these different groups. When all suffer and prosper together then something will be done to help all. This also applies to the officials of cooperative exchanges who get their good salaries just the same, whatever happens to the poor growers. I include herewith the growers of scores of other products from potatoes in Maine to prunes in California, and peaches in Georgia.

ROGER W. BABSON

A second newspaper clipping reads as follows:

"For the first time in 10 years everyone willing to work in our town is fully employed. This compares with a large surplus of labor a few years ago. In fact, there is an actual shortage of labor here at the present time. Even our newspaper office is looking for two boys—a condition that never existed before. Of course, this is due to the war orders which have come to our community. But something is wrong when we must manufacture things to kill people in order to give our men employment."

The above illustrates conditions in America and, to a large extent, today in many other countries. Readers brought up in conservative Republican homes have been taught "this is the way of the world" and that these conditions must always be expected. We have been told "the poor will always be with us" and that "under the laws of nature only the fittest should survive!"

Our difficulty has been not only with the wrong definition of the "fittest," but also with the fact that we have artificially put nature out of balance. Normally, the laws of nature will bring forth a good forest. When man, however, artificially sets a forest on fire, then other artificial means must be instituted to put it out. There would have been no abnormal unemployment problem if the character of our people had progressed at the same rate as the machine. Trouble came when we forgot God and went "machine crazy." It is dangerous now to assume that the employment problem has been "solved." It has been given only a "shot-in-the-arm."

I believe in a social structure which is founded on private ownership and which requires employers and wage workers, hiring and firing and natural price levels, so long as these do not interfere with the greatest good for the greatest number. If, however, we can take care of the unemployed, when our own protection is at stake, we can provide work for them in times of peace. A truly Christian society demands some way of doing this however it hurts both those living on dividends or those living on relief.

We must change our fatal individualistic philosophy which believes that only through the material enrichment of the individual is the community enriched. Some day we will put the good of the community—including ourselves—before any indivíual, including ourselves.

A permanent home for members of the motion picture industry who are no longer able to care for themselves is a step nearer realization today, thanks to the "Screen Guild Theater" programs which you hear over WJSV and the Columbia network on Sundays.

Jean Hersholt, president of the Motion Picture Relief Fund, has announced that a 40-acre site has been purchased for the institution, on which approximately a million dollars is to be spent. The site is in the beautiful San Fernando Valley, just outside of Hollywood.

Thus far more than $800,000 has been collected for the fund from the "Screen Guild Theater" programs which have been on C. B. S. for three years. Actors, writers, technicians, producers, directors—most of them the most famous in Hollywood—have donated their services to the series. The $10,000 fee paid by the sponsor goes entirely to the fund.

Said Hersholt in announcing the purchase of the site: "Soon on this land we will build a wonderful home for the workers of our industry who cannot longer provide for themselves. From the bottom of my heart I thank the stars who have so freely given their services, and I thank the Gulf Oil Company, the sponsors, for their part in helping us bring to realization the great home that has been a dream in the motion picture industry for many, many, many years."

Contract Bridge

This question concerns the play of today's hand, which was described by Mrs. Olive Peterson, co-author of "One Hundred and One Celebrated Hands." You are sitting South at a four-heart contract, and West leads the spade four. How would you play the hand so as to take ten tricks? The answer is given below.

Today's Hand

Both Sides Vulnerable
SOUTH DEALER

	♠ 10.2 ♡ Q 9 7 3 ◇ K 8 ♣ A J 9 6 8
♠ Q 6 5 4 3 ♡ 4 2 ◇ J 7 4 3 ♣ 3 2	WEST	EAST ♠ K 9 8 7 ♡ 8 5 ◇ A Q 10 6 ♣ K 5 4
	♠ A J ♡ A K J 10 6 ◇ 9 5 2 ♣ Q 10 7

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: ♠ 4.

Declarer makes his four-heart contract by making a safety play, ducking the opening lead and preventing West from making a dangerous lead through dummy. Before playing a card on the four of spades, declarer can see that if the king of clubs and the ace of diamonds are both in the East hand, he will be defeated if he takes the first round of spades, as the king from East marks West with the queen. Therefore, South ducks the first spade and, when East continues the suit, wins the ace.

Declarer then knocks out trumps and finesses the queen of clubs, losing to East. East, however, has no play to save game and declarer wins one spade, five trumps and four clubs for his contract, giving up but one club, one spade and a diamond.

If declarer had taken the first spade with his ace, East, after getting in with the club king, would have put West in the lead with the queen of spades. West, seeing no spades in dummy, would have led a diamond, giving his side one spade, one club and two diamonds, enough to defeat the contract.

Sally Hall Dies in W. Va. Auto Crash

Miss Sally Rogers Hall, 26, a teacher at Fairfax Hall (Va.) and daughter of Lieut. Col. John Randolph Hall, Army Medical Corps, of Alexandria, was killed early yesterday in an automobile accident near Charles Town, W. Va.

In the West Virginia city to attend the wedding of a fellow Fairfax Hall teacher, Miss Hall died when the automobile in which she was riding struck a pole on Route 340, 3 miles east of Charles Town.

A companion, Phillip T. Porterfield, jr., of Charles Town, also a member of the wedding party, was taken to Charles Town General Hospital with serious injuries.

A native of Fort Logan, Colo., Miss Hall was educated at Creighton University, Omaha. Before joining the Fairfax Hall faculty, she taught a year in an Omaha high school and two years at Bluefield College, W. Va. Her father is attached to the Surgeon General's office here.

Crash Fatal to Driver

J. C. Jacobs, 24 of Kingport, Tenn., died yesterday at Emergency Hospital from injuries suffered a week ago when his truck overturned on Route 50, near Pleasant Valley, Va., after colliding with an automobile.

J. B. Tipton, also of Kingport, helper on Jacobs' truck, was slightly injured in the accident, which occurred early last Monday. Bernie E. McDaniel, 22, of Winchester, driver of the other car, according to Fairfax County police, was unhurt.

Mrs. A. S. Clayton, 60, of Ashland, Va., sustained a broken arm yesterday in a two-car collision on Lee Highway near Legato, Va. The car in which Mrs. Clayton was riding was driven by T. E. West, of Williamsburg, Ky., according to police. They said it struck the rear of an automobile driven by Howard A. Bryant, of Novum, Va., who was not hurt.

A Child Injured

John Harold Garber, 5, of Boyds, Montgomery County, was brought to the Frederick City Hospital yesterday with head injuries following a fall from an automobile near Frederick Junction. Maryland State police said the child fell from the machine when a door flew open while the car was traveling between 45 and 50 miles an hour. They said an automobile traveling closely behind the Garber automobile swerved sharply to prevent running over the child.

Five-year-old Patricia Ruppert, of 3814 Legation Street Northwest, was slightly injured as she was coming home from church yesterday when she walked into the side of a passing car and was thrown to the curb at Chevy Chase Circle.

She was taken home by her father, Milton F. Ruppert, District real estate dealer, and found to have minor bruises. Police released the driver of the car without charges.

Capt. McKaig To Take Medical Field Course

Special Dispatch to The Post

El Paso, Tex., March 30.—Capt. Malcolm C. McKaig, of the Medical Detachment of the 260th Coast Artillery Antiaircraft Regiment of Washington, D. C., has departed for Carlisle, Pa., where he will enroll in the Medical Field Service School for a ten weeks' course, beginning April 1.

Capt. McKaig

He is a graduate of Georgetown University Medical School, class of 1937, and has been with the Medical Corps of the National Guard of the District of Columbia since June, 1937.

According to an announcement by Col. Walter W. Burns, Capt. Robert J. Martin, commanding officer of Battery G of the 260th Coast Artillery, will attend a two-month special course at the Command and General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., from April 21 to June 21. Capt. Martin has been with the regiment since 1932, and previously held a commission in the Texas National Guard. As a civilian he is employed in Washington in the United States Weather Bureau.

Willkie Offered To Pay Doctor's Bill, Martin Says

Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts, chairman of the Republican National Committee, said last night that Wendell L. Willkie offered to pay the $13,000 bill presented by Dr. D. Harold Barnard, of Beverley, Calif., who treated his throat during the 1940 Presidential campaign. However, Martin said that he had regarded this service as a proper obligation of the National organization, though he considered the total too high.

His statement follows:

"In order that there may be no misunderstanding about the claim of Dr. D. Harold Barnard for compensation for medical services, I want to state that, when the bill was presented, Mr. Willkie offered to pay it. But I said that it grew out of a proper expense of the campaign and should be paid by the National Committee. However, I thought the bill was too high and I turned the matter over to the treasurer of the committee for adjustment."

Dr. Barnard, who said his normal fee was $500 a day when he was called for similiar services which took him away from his lucrative practice in Hollywood, set $100 a day as his straight fee for the campaign service, and added an approximation of the additional amount he could have expected to receive from motion picture stars during his absence.

Founding of Catholic Order Celebrated

Alexandria Movies Flout Sunday Ban

Apparently basing their action on a ruling handed down ten days ago by Commonwealth's Attorney Albert V. Bryan, who nolle prossed a warrant against operators of a skating rink charged with operating on Sunday, Alexandria's moving picture theaters opened their doors yesterday for the entertainment of Selective Service trainees assigned to Fort Belvoir and other nearby Army bases.

Their opening climaxed a campaign by the northern Virginia defense council, headed by Gardner L. Boothe, who told the Alexandria City Council that Sunday movies would contribute largely to the city's efforts to provide recreation for the trainees who visit Alexandria on weekend leave from their bases.

Although the Alexandria Ministerial Association adopted a resolution opposing Sunday movies several weeks ago, there was no opposition to their opening yesterday, and police said they had received no complaints. Unless a specific complaint is filed, they said, no action will be taken against the theater operators.

Theaters which opened their doors in defiance of Virginia's ancient "blue law" included the Reed, Richmond and Ingomar, operated by the Alexandria Amusement Corporation; the Palm and Vernon, operated by the Vernon Amusement Corporation, and the Capital, a theater run for colored patrons by Harry Wasserman.

Sunday moving pictures have been indorsed by a number of Alexandria organizations, including the Alexandria Bar Association and a group of four Episcopal ministers.

Italians Shoot Alien In Back as a Spy

Rome, March 30 (AP).—A foreigner named John Spearces, whose nationality was not disclosed, has been shot in the back as a spy, an Italian communique said tonight.

Spearces, the communique said, was caught after military experts succeeded in isolating a secret radio by which he transmitted information for use by "a foreign power."

Bronco Buster's Ear Kicked Off For Third Time

The act before intermission proved to be an unexpected thriller for 3,200 spectators attending the World Championship Rodeo at Uline's Arena last night. "Red" Hammerschmidt, 29, of McLoughlin, S. Dak., lost his left ear and suffered a fractured jaw when bucked off and kicked by a wild bronco.

For Hammerschmidt, loss of the ear was an old feeling. Twice before a horse's hoof slashed off the left ear and both times it was successfully sewn back into place. A third attempt to restore the ear will be made at Casualty Hospital, where the cowboy was removed.

The rodeo, featuring Gene Autry, cowboy film star, will continue through next Sunday.

Berlin Cheers Matsuoka as He Leaves for Rome

Thousands of Berliners jammed the streets from Bellevue Palace, Germany's guest house for distinguished visitors, to Anhalter Station to which Matsuoka was escorted by Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop.

Many of the Berliners waved Japanese flags. At the station, companies of soldiers presented arms. The train left after Matsuoka shook hands with Ribbentrop, Heinrich Himmler, Nazi Gestapo chief, and the diplomatic representatives of the other Axis members.

This forenoon Matsuoka drove to suburban Potsdam, where he visited the imperial palace of Sans Souci and the church where Frederick the Great is buried.

Road Planned To Ease Jam At Arlington

Defense construction in nearby Arlington County has speeded up plans for a new road to relieve traffic congestion at the approach to the Arlington Memorial Bridge, it was learned yesterday.

The new road, according to plans being worked out by the Public Roads Administration, will cross the Arlington Cantonment and connect Military Road with the Columbia Island traffic plaza, a distance of about a mile. The Interior Department, it was reported, will seek a $300,000 allocation from defense funds to finance the project. Plans call for a four-lane divided highway.

Congestion Grows

Traffic congestion at the Memorial Bridge, already serious in rush hours, will become more acute with completion of Government office buildings which are under construction or scheduled to be built under the Federal defense program, officials said.

An office building capable of housing 5,000 Navy Department employes is already under construction at Arlington Ridge Road and Columbia Pike. In addition, the Public Building Administration has proposed the construction of six temporary office buildings at Memorial Avenue and Arlington Ridge Road. The Senate will vote, probably today, on an amendment to authorize this project, estimated to cost $4,100,000.

Building Adds to Jam

Besides this Federal construction, private building development in Arlington is expected to reach unprecedented proportions, further aggravating the traffic situation at the Memorial Bridge approach to the Capital.

The Arlington County Board, at its meeting Saturday, rezoned five blocks on Columbia Pike at Bancroft to permit construction of a $4,000,000 apartment development. Plans call for 900 dwelling uits, housing 3,600 persons.

The anticipated influx of new residents and the Government's defense construction program have caused concern among Arlington officials over the adequacy of public school facilities and the county sewage disposal plant at Four Mile Run. County Manager Frank C. Hanrahan has appealed for Federal assistance to meet the increasing demands upon the county caused by the Government's expanding defense activities.

4-H Program Set

The Prince Georges County (Md.) Senior 4-H Council yesterday announced future meetings would be devoted to programs centering on national defense, American citizenship, the Constitution and safety. The council, which consists of older 4-H club boys and girls, meets on the third Thursday of each month at 7 p. m. in the County Service Building at Hyattsville.

Stirring Times Are Recalled As Jail Makes Way for Park

WRECKAGE—This is what was left of the old jail between Bladensburg and Hyattsville after the CCC dynamited it

Long since outmoded and abandoned, the one-cell jail which once housed prisoners from Hyattsville and Bladensburg has been torn down to make way for park development along the Eastern Branch of the Anacostia River.

CCC workers have been clearing away the underbrush along the branch at the direction of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission for the past few weeks to open up the area.

Last week the ancient lockup was razed. Many are the tales told about the jail.

There was the time that two prisoners were caught in the cell during one of the perennial Bladensburg floods and the jailer could not be found to release them. On the jailer's arrival, the prisoners were found standing on their beds waist-deep in water, yelling for help.

During prohibition, the four-prisoner capacity cell was often overtaxed to accommodate the nonpaying guests overnight. One night, report has it, 29 prisoners were confined there.

Union Local Backs Rent Control Bill

The Railroad Retirement Board Local 13 of the United Federal Workers of America yesterday urged Congress immediately to pass the Randolph rent control bill.

The local adopted a resolution stating that "rent increases are already beginning to take place and will become very general and oppressive unless legislation is enacted to prevent landlords and real-estate operators from excessive profiteering."

Willkie Says Axis Imperils Trade

New York, March 30 (AP).—Wendell L. Willkie asserted today in a broadcast over the N. B. C.-Red Network "That our very prosperity and standard of living—the prerequisites to the continuance of our democracy—cannot be maintained in a world where totalitarian methods of trade prevail."

"America must and will uphold the hand of Britain," he said.

Willkie spoke under the auspices of the British War Relief Society and introduced the British poet and novelist, Cecil Roberts, who read his latest poem, "A Man Arose," dedicated to Prime Minister Churchill.

Baering Down On the News

By Arthur "Bugs" Baer

Distributed by I. N. S.

The Serbs figured they could use a crosstown transfer east or west and tried it both ways in a day. The tough lads from the Balkans can fight like a wildcat treed on a fencepost.

Like the old lady in the beauty parlor—that puts a different face on it. I am not an expert on the Balkans, as I prefer my real estate a trifle more house-broken and a bit more horizontal.

That fitted in fine with the Greek warrior, who likes nothing better than a game of tag. When it's his turn to chase you the game is over.

Now, when a nation likes freedom so much it won't wear pants, I say that nation is dangerous. If the Greeks, the Turks, the Serbs and the Scots ever form an axis I guarantee that my wife's dressmaker is going to make my clothes, too.

They are the toughest fighting men there are and I'm going to walk around in the prettiest pair of kilts you ever saw, hollering, "Hooray for our side!"
